Japanese Ambassador Says "Get-Together Spirit" Necessary to Insure Friendly Relations Between United States and Japan

HONOLULU, T. H., Aug. 27.—The "get together" spirit, an international application of the methods of chambers of commerce and boards of trade, is all that is required to insure friendly relations between the United States and Japan, according to Baron Jijiori (Goro), Japanese ambassador to Mexico, who is on his way home for a visit.

"To promote and insure a better understanding between the peoples of the United States and Japan, and to further neutralize harmful propaganda endangering friendly relations," said the Baron, "it is essential that henceforth honest and courageous efforts be made by all concerned to meet in open discussion of the political, economical and social problems facing the two nations."

"A barrier of ignorance, race hatred and jealousy has unfortunately substituted the innocent isolation which formerly precluded intercourse between Japan and the United States.

"With the universal acceptance of democracy and liberal thought in international relations, it is time there should be a closer and better understanding between the two nations. Let us have a real get-together movement; let us rub elbows and get acquainted.

"To facilitate the early realization of such a movement, I wish to make these suggestions:

"That the diplomatic, consular and other official representatives of Japan and America be selected from men willing to give hearty co-operation toward cementing cordial relations.

"That scholarships be established in the leading American and Japanese universities devoted to the history and literature of both countries.

"That Japanese university graduates, thoroughly familiar with English, be allowed to matriculate in American universities for post graduate work without any qualifying examination.

"That trade and other commissions, composed of leading citizens, exchange visits for the purpose of obtaining first hand information on public questions.

"That the agency of the motion picture be employed in both countries to diffuse knowledge of geography, customs, dress and social manners."
