"A DESERT HERO"

Who hasn't grown a little weary, now and then, of the marvelous marksmanship and other superhuman feats that are displayed by the hero of the typical wild and woolly screen drama? A good laugh is the best cure for that tired feeling, no matter what causes it; and that is the remedy provided by Fatty Arbuckle comedy, "A Desert Hero," which comes to the Star Theatre tonight.

Back in 1888, when the Pacific coast was one grand, free place, a little shaver and his sister, a little shavess, used to travel up and down the old mission road with a song and dance that was very hoighty-toighty.

Nowadays the little shaver is playing character roles at Universal City and his sister, the little shavess, is bringing up a family and making folks happy with a concert harp.

The little shaver was Johnnie Cooke, the famous character actor.

In the early days of Los Angeles, even before the great Iowa immigration, Johnnie's father ran a music store. Johnnie helped out behind the counter every day after school; that is, until spring came with its peculiar influence over the drifting feet of the young. Then Johnnie would light out for San Francisco or San Diego and put on a little song and dance at the "opery" house.

His most famous role was an appearance in the uniform of an Irish policeman, club, badge and all, when he would sing: "Are Ye There Morlarity?"

Folks called him the vest pocket edition of Billy Emerson and predicted a great future for him.

When he appeared with his sister they did a little riot entitled: "O! Yah, ain't that foine."

Once in a while in the hot summer months Johnnie used to act as chauffeur for his uncle's ice-wagon. In the evening's he would sing and dance. At one ultra-fashionable reception a lady jorgnetted him and hisped

"You are a very talented little man; where have I seen you before?"

"Why I'm the iceman, I am," Johnnie answered. The butler ushered him out.

Johnnie Cooke's best work, he says himself is in the role of J. B. Hanks in support of Mary MacLaren in the Universal star's recent success, "The Weaker Vessel," appearing at the Liberty Theatre tomorrow.

You are invited to visit our establishment and hear the Aeolian Player-Piano . . . .

We invite the Klamath Falls music lovers to call and hear the AEOILIAN PLAYER-PIANOS which we have in our store and to let us explain to you their many virtues.

In many respects the AEOILIAN PLAYER-PIANO is THE AEOILIAN COMPANY'S most remarkable achievement. For this instrument, though sold at a popular price, embodies qualities, both tonal and constructional, of extraordinary character. Instead of being playable in one way only, like the old style piano, it offers two methods of playing—one from the keyboard, the other by means of perforated music-rolls and pneumatic action.

Nothing less than the lifelong experience of the AEOILIAN COMPANY in building pneumatic instruments could result in so perfect a system of pneumatics as that found in the AEOILIAN PLAYER-PIANO.

Below is a list of a few of the prominent patrons of the AEOILIAN OMPANY in America:

- |                              |                          |
|------------------------------|--------------------------|
| The late Theodore Roosevelt. | Louis C. Tiffany.        |
| Elhu Root.                   | The late James J. Hill.  |
| The late Andrew Carnegie.    | Thos. F. Ryan.           |
| The late J. Pierpont Morgan. | Anthony F. Drexel.       |
| John D. Rockefeller.         | Cyrus K. Curtis.         |
| William Rockefeller.         | William R. Hearst.       |
| John D. Rockefeller, Jr.     | Harry Payne Whitney.     |
| Cornelius Vanderbilt.        | Mrs. Phoebe Hearst.      |
| W. K. Vanderbilt.            | Mrs. J. Ogden Armour.    |
| George J. Gould.             | Miss Maude Adams.        |
| Theodore P. Shonts.          | Thos. A. Edison.         |
| Chas. M. Schwab.             | Archbishop P. J. Ryan.   |
| Clarence H. Mackay.          | Daniel Frohman.          |
|                              | Howard Chandler Christy. |

In England the success of Aeolian instruments has been remarkable. It is interesting to know that every branch of the English Royal Family possesses one of these instruments.

The list of the AEOILIAN COMPANY'S royal patrons abroad includes practically all the leading European sovereigns.

PROTECT YOURSELF AND BANK

SIGNING a blank check ( to be afterwards filled in with name and amount) is dangerous business. If such a check should become lost or stolen—ANYONE might fill it in and make collection upon it at the bank. The drawer, of course, in such case would be responsible for his own loss.

Protecting the depositor's interests is the FIRST CONSIDERATION here at the First National Bank.
