Enough work in sight to pay for it

"Hello, Jack! You're just in time for a cold bottle. I brewed it from a product of malt and hops. It's easy to make. There's no skill or apparatus required and it's got the good old taste, foam and everything. It's not against the law to make Bebe Syrup at home. You'll enjoy the beverage you brew from Bebe Syrup. It's not sweet and sickening like acid containing fruit drinks.

And it costs you only 7 cents a quart to brew.

If, after following our directions, you should not be satisfied with the brew produced, we will refund your money.

Home brewing, like bread baking, is a matter of proper fermentation; and some experience is necessary to secure the best results. Therefore your succeeding brews probably will be even better than the first.

BREW YOUR OWN FROM BEBE SYRUP

WARNING

BE CAREFUL TO FOLLOW THE DIRECTIONS WHEN BREWING BEEBE SYRUP. AS EVERY HALF-POUND OF BEBE SYRUP ADDED TO FIVE GALLONS OF WATER WILL PRODUCE 1/2 OF 1 PER CENT ALCOHOLIC STRENGTH BY VOLUME, DO NOT USE MORE THAN THIS QUANTITY SO AS TO COMPLY WITH THE DRY LAW.

WE ARE ALSO AGENTS FOR BREWERS' MALT, A MALT MADE ESPECIALLY FOR HOME BREW; GETS THE RESULTS WITHOUT THE WILDNESS OF THE COMMON BAKER'S MALT.

WE CAN FURNISH YOU CAPS; ALL KINDS OF CAPPERS, BOTTLES, SELECTED HOPS AND THE HOW TO DO IT.

Do you love the great outdoors? Do you thrill to stories, splendid in their simplicity, that limn the passions and hopes of men and women against the magnificent background of woods and mountains?

Is there something in the magic of Nature that in your mind enhances tenfold the romance of a story told under the sky, with all the wide world for a stage?

In "What Am I Bid?" Mae Murray, the Pollies girl, darling of New York's cabarets and roof gardens, shows her remarkable versatility by becoming for the time a simple child of Nature, living her artless, touching life in a backwoods settlement.

Amid scenes of striking natural grandeur she enacts the story of a child to whom come womanhood and love and hate, fear and struggle and triumph.

On her beats the fierce fire of a brutal man's lust. She knows despair, she sees her own father betray her into the power of the beast. But then comes "The Stranger"—the man from the great world beyond the mountain range that fences her horizon—to teach her the worth of true manhood, to fight for her and to love her.

There comes, too, final test—when the great world calls to him again, to take him back to his home, his wealth, his fiancée. What is his answer to the summons? It forms the climax of this compelling tale of the open places.

Come to the Liberty tonight and see "What Am I Bid?"

Whether Bryant Washburn picks

his own heroine or not, we cannot say. But he picks good ones.

In "The Ghost of the Rancho," the leading female role is handled with delightful expertness of Rheta Mitchell. Little Miss Mitchell comes to the screen with several years of experience in stock companies. She has a charming personality and in the new Pathe play starring the ingenuous young Washburn, she has ample opportunity to afford her emotional powers full play.

"The Ghost of the Rancho" is coming to the Liberty Wednesday.

The daring deeds of the aviators in the Allied service will form material for song and story long, long after the war is ended. It has largely been a war in the air, as H. G. Wells, the English author, once prophesied would come to pass. Many a brave birdman has written history in the circumambient ether, and made for himself an unforgettable memory.

In the new Paramount picture, "The Firefly of France," which is to be seen at the Star Theatre tonight, the deeds of an intrepid airman are the basis of the story which concerns more particularly the saving of certain important papers that the Firefly has captured from the Germans. Wallace Reid and Ann Little have the leading roles and Raymond Hatton is the Firefly. Donald Crisp directed the picture.

Caught while attempting to steal the jewels of the Bayard family, which Senator Bayard was planning to present to his bride on the day of his wedding, a young woman of remarkable beauty known as Lois Hartner, will probably escape punishment for the crime, it appearing she was simply the tool of others. Senator Bayard is to marry the daughter of Governor Burton—Miss Dorothy Burton, a debutante of the season and one of the most exquisite brunettes of the social set of the city.

That is what you might expect to read in your newspaper, but in reality it is merely a part of the story of "The Girl Who Came Back" based upon the play "Leah Kleschna" and featuring as its star, Ethel Claydon, who appears for the first time under the Paramount banner. The picture is being shown at the Temple theatre tonight.
