

PORTLAND MILK PRICES RAISED

PORTLAND, Oct. 3.—Milk prices here took a jump to 15 cents a quart on October 1, on payment in advance basis of 16 cents on deferred accounts. The distributor will be compelled to pay the producer $2.90 a hundred. Through a recommendation of the milk commission the price of milk was fixed at 14½ and 15½ cents a quart last fall, the producer receiving $2.85 a hundred. Producers declare that feed and labor are higher than last year and that consequently the rise in price is necessary.

The Best of New Fall Apparel Is Here

And the prices asked are indeed modest when consideration is given to the qualities of the garments. One hears or reads so many statements to the effect that really desirable wearing apparel is prohibitive in price, that we are prompted to declare them untrue—at least insofar as we are concerned. Here you will find really

Beautiful New Models in COATS, SUITS AND DRESSES

at about the prices you have in mind to pay. Of course there are elaborate frocks, suits and coats to sell at prices that, to the person of average income, seem extremely high. Many stores show garments to sell at $100 to $150—and when all things are taken into consideration, they are probably worth it. Our selections, however, have been governed by the requirements of the woman who has in mind a fixed price that she wishes to pay—and in most cases it comes somewhere in our scale of prices. And each of these represents the utmost in value.

- Fashionable Frocks $16.50 to $65.00
- Smart Fall Suits $40.00 to $75.00
- Cloth and Plush Coats..... $20.00 to $85.00

MISSISSIPPI NEGROES HAPPY

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Exceptional happiness, contentment and prosperity among the negroes of Mississippi is reported by a committee of Chicago white and negro men after an investigation of conditions in that state. The committee was delegated to visit Mississippi by the Chicago Association of Commerce, the federal Bureau of Labor and by organized labor to which had been referred a question of aiding the return of Southern born negroes to the South. A written statement prepared by the committee said: "The happiness, contentment and prosperity found among the colored race in Mississippi is much greater than the committee expected to find. We know no place where greater happiness and prosperity prevail among them." School facilities were found to be good, churches adequate, housing conditions being improved rapidly and race relations good, according to the report, while the industrious negro is afforded excellent opportunities to become a land owner. No police oppression, imposition or "lawlessness" was found. Negro workers in the sawmill districts were reported happy and contented. Many of the farm laborers were found to be working on the share system. Negroes having no capital teams or implements are equipped by the land owner, receiving, usually a half of the crop they produce, while those with teams and implements are given two thirds. The statement continues: "We found that the average worker who cultivated what is known as the 'one mule crop' was able, using the year 1918 as a criterion, to produce a sufficient crop to net him, over and above all living expenses, from $500 to $1,500 a year. We found several men who began work under the tenant system and who now own their own plantations and are themselves employers of negro labor and are worth from $10,000 to $175,000. These facts were secured from the negroes themselves and we had the privilege of riding with them and surveying their farms in automobiles they own."
