At the Theatres

If you want to see some remarkable "gun play" go to the Liberty Theatre tonight, where "The Lone Star Ranger" with William Farnum in the title role will be shown for the last time. This popular star gives a performance that will long be remembered by all who witness it. It shows Farnum at his best and his best can't be beaten.

"His Birthright"—his right to his father's name.

That is the motif of the great human drama starring Susue Hayakawa, the Japanese dramatic star whose fame is world wide.

Grown to manhood, secure in his belief that the name he bore was legally his, a young Japanese has revealed to him the true story of his birth. He found himself an outcast—without honor in his own country or abroad.

But the blood of his mother's ancestors ran in his veins. It cried aloud for vengeance against the father who had deserted him, now become an admiral of the American navy. So he started on his voyage of vengeance determined to kill.

But the way of the avenger is often long and its side trails lead to strange destinations. Yukio found his father serving a great flag in a great cause—the war against Germany.

What wonder that the young man with hot blood in his veins decided that the greater fight was the truer vengeance, and enlisted to serve under the stars and stripes against the world's enemy.

At the Liberty Tuesday.

In the picturization of Mark Lee Luther's "The Hope Chest," Dorothy Gish carries the same personality and character that made her famous in "Hearts of the World." In many scenes she uses almost the same costume, and the disdainful tossing of her head; the chic and teasing expressions that once brought peals of laughter from the audience when she acted the "Little Disturber" part; the whole individuality of her biggest success are being used to make this picture the most attractive in which she has yet appeared. It will be displayed at the Star Theatre tonight.

Director Elmer Clinton states that the picture the picture is like nothing else ever done as to characterization, pathos, sympathy and laughter. George Fawcett, the veteran character actor, spent several weeks rehearsing and advising with Miss Gish as to the way in which certain scenes should be played.

a Kuppenheimer suit shows the same skill and care of the master-tailor in every detail. The fancy silk lining of the coat, harmonizing beautifully with the suit fabric, lends a distinguishing touch that is exclusively Kuppenheimer. All inside seams are handsomely piped with silk instead of plain alpaca. In fact, a Kuppenheimer suit is just as good-looking on the inside as the outside. Distinctive Fall Styles to show you.
