HICKORY SHIRTS FOR COURT CROWD

Peter Beck, a logger in the Chilquin district, was acquitted on two charges in the U. S. district court at Medford last week. In one case he was charged with bringing liquor from Doris, California, into Klamath last May. Doris at the time was "wet" territory and Klamath was "dry." The other charge alleged a sale of liquor to Indians of the Klamath reservation.

In connection with the Beck case the Medford Mail-Tribune tells the following story:

An amusing incident occurred when Beck's attorney, W. H. Renner of Klamath Falls, in trying to influence the jury in favor of his client dwelt on the fact that Beck was "a poor lumber jack who spent his life working and living in the woods and was not able to wear a starched collar, necktie and white shirt like men in other walks of life."

His argument finished then B. E. Haney, United States district attorney opened for the government and in addressing the jury sought to counteract any effect that the defendant's attorney may have made on the jury. Mr. Haney ridiculed

Renner's attempt to appeal to class prejudice and his plea about the poor man's rights, paying especial mention to the remarks about the white collar, tie and white shirt.

"Why gentlemen of the jury," he said, "the absurdity of such a contention bearing on the guilt or innocence of the accused is realized when it is seen that in the crowd of persons in this court room there is only one man with a white collar, tie and white shirt."

Then everyone in the court room looked around to discover who was the man that held such a conspicuous honor. Hence all eyes after a careful perusal of all the men finally centered on the dignified Judge Wolverton. Every professional business and other man than the judge either wore negligee shirts or unstarched collars.

Snails have a remarkable vitality. A naturalist once revived some specimens after they had apparently been dead for 15 years, and one that had been glued to a card in a museum returned to life after being immersed in warm water.

TACOMA PASTOR WILL PREACH HERE

KLAMATH YOUTHS DRIVE TO O. A. C.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, Corvallis, Oct. 17.—(Special to The Herald).—A. W. McComb and A. M. Case, students in the Oregon Agricultural college, drove here in a Ford bug from Klamath-Falls for the opening of college.

Starting from Klamath Falls at 7 o'clock Friday morning, September 19, they drove over Topay grade to Ashland, via the Shasta valley. From the Oregon line north they encountered nearly 30 road-building outfits, either paving or putting in cement culverts.

"We had a real thrill coming down the Siskiyou," they said. "The steering wheel suddenly came off the post and the car began to decide upon its own course down the winding road." They slammed on the brakes, though, in time to keep from piling off the grade. The steering wheel had gradually unscrewed and let the wheel come off.

The car belongs to Mr. McComb and he fondly calls it "Betsy Ross," after the designer of the American flag, which forms the snappy design of the body. The body is especially made for four passengers, with one door on the right side.

An average of 20 miles to the gallon was made on the trip from Klamath Falls, which is considered exceptionally good, considering the grades, both on the highway and in the Cascades.

CUT DOWN Your Shoe Expense

Yes. Cut it down. Cut it down by buying better shoes—Crossett Shoes. Crossett Shoes may cost you more than the kind you have been buying but you will find them far cheaper to wear than shoes which are not so high in quality.

A quality shoe like Crossett holds its shape better, wears far longer, re-soles better.

It is a fact that shoes which cost half as much seldom give half as much wear. That is what our customers are finding out, and that is why they are coming back to us for these fine shoes.

We are headquarters for Crossett Shoes.

The new models for Fall and Winter are now in. Men and women who want to keep their shoe expense down to its lowest point will do well to call now while the stocks are so complete.
