SEWARD, Alaska, Sept. 29. (By Mail)—Waterfront property in Seward has been set aside by the Alaska Engineering Commission for coal docks for the Navy Department.

BULGARS HAVE RECOVERED FROM EFFECTS OF WAR

SOFIA, Oct. 5.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press).—Bulgaria gives no outward sign of a country having been at war. A large part of the army has been demobilized, commercial activity has been resumed, the crops are excellent, there is an abundance of food in the country, the health of the population is good, and everybody is devoting himself to the active pursuits of peace.

The war has become only a memory in the minds of the thrifty and philosophical Bulgarian peasants, who are so absorbed in their agricultural and household pursuits that they have little or no time to think of the past. But all eyes are naturally turned to Paris, where the destinies of Bulgaria are being weighed. The attitude of mind of the people might be described as one of "hoping for the best but expecting the worst."

Bulgaria suffered no property damage by hostile invasion or bombardment, and lost comparatively few lives by wounds or disease. It may be years, however, before Bulgaria regains her former financial position. The war cost her more than $1,000,000,000. If she is required to pay the Allies the indemnity of $500,000,000 and is called upon to return the billion dollars she borrowed from Germany, her financial position will be more than serious. Her present war liabilities total more than half her national wealth.

The Italians, whose friendship the Bulgarians have been assiduously cultivating, have sent large quantities of goods into the country. The French have likewise sent a considerable amount. The British have an economic mission here, but little merchandise has come into Bulgaria from England.

The Bulgarian government and people are extremely anxious that the United States should establish active trade relations with them. There is great need of farm implements, machinery, fabrics and manufactured articles of all kinds. The United States appointed a consul to Bulgaria in May, but he has not yet arrived in Sofia. The Bulgarians are hopeful he may be able to bring the two countries into closer commercial relationship. There is an immense accumulation of tobacco and attar of roses which the government is anxious to dispose of. There has been so little demand for attar of roses, due to the war, that a number of peasants have turned their rose gardens into vegetable farms.

The stores of Sofia gradually are filling up. Goods are filtering through from Italy, France and Greece. The low rate of exchange, however, has placed heavy burdens on the local merchants. The Bulgarian franc, which at par is worth 20 cents, is now equivalent to only 4 cents. The American dollar and the Greek drachma (franc) are the only moneys that sell at their face value.

Until peace is signed by all the Balkan States, the French and Italian armies may continue to occupy Bulgaria. The Greeks now are massed in large numbers in Macedonia and along the Bulgarian frontier. The Italians, by their moderation and deportment, have won the favor of the Bulgarians, but the French are extremely unpopular.

The French army has a large force of colored and other colonial troops here. The Bulgarians complain of frequent attacks on women and other disorders by these colored soldiers.
