At the Theatres

H. B. Warner the famous actor who stars in "The Gray Wolf's Ghost," a slim version of Bret Harte's story, Maruja, released by Robertson-Cole as a Superior Picture, was long known on the stage as "the perfect lover." Mr. Warner has justified his right to the appellation by his work for the screen in such productions as "For a Woman's Honor," "The Pagan God" and "The Man Who Turned White." Mr. Warner makes his final appearance tonight in "The Gray Wolf's Ghost at the Liberty.

"The Blue Bonnet," Billie Rhodes newest starring vehicle produced by the National Film Corporation of America for W. W. Hodgkinson distribution, comes to the Liberty Theatre, Friday.

"The Blue Bonnet" tells the exciting life story of a Salvation Army captain, Ruth Drake, who, deserted by her mother as an infant, is given shelter in the home of Caleb Fry, a pawnbroker, to whom her parent had gone for aid after she had fled from her husband to take up a stage career in New York. The pawnshop has become a "fence" for a band of robbers, among them being Danny Fowler, known to all as the sweetheart of Ruth. To remove her from the harmful environment, Fry sends Ruth out in boy's clothes to sell papers. On a stormy night she encounters a stranger, who gives the urchin some food. He proves to be Jetrus Drake, a lawyer, who has sworn to kill his wife and has come to New York in search of her.

The wife becomes a star vaudeville performer and has grown to love her manager, Sidney Haviland. He joins the army and goes overseas on the same transport that carried Danny who has enlisted. Ruth joins the Salvationists on condition that she be permitted to go overseas in order to be near Danny. But he is killed and Haviland wounded in their first engagement. Ruth, heartbroken, returns to America with Haviland. They are seen together by the actress and, saddened by jealousy, the latter has Ruth arrested on a trumped-up charge of robbery. In a smashing climax father and daughter are united in court and the erring wife and mother flees from the scene.

NO SERIOUS DAMAGE IN AUTO ACCIDENT
W. O. Robertson and Joe Kent escaped without injury when Robertson's automobile overturned on a grade on one of the streets in the west side of town last evening. The car was not seriously damaged. That the consequences of the accident were not more serious is considered marvelous.

"THE PICK OF THE PICTURES"

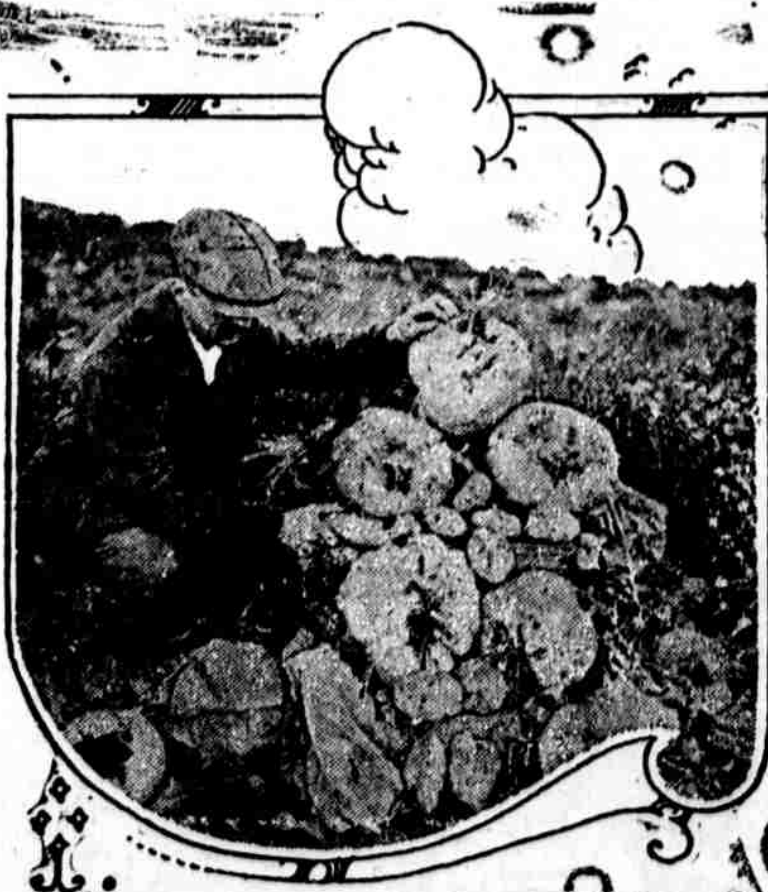

H. W. POOLE, Owner. HARRY BOREL, Musical Director

Tonight will be your final opportunity to see "THE GRAY WOLF'S GHOST," the Bret Harte story, in which H. B. Warner plays the leading role. Or rather the two leading roles, for Mr. Warner takes the part of both Dr. West and that of his son. And when the two characters appear together on the screen—each played by the same man—one can realize where H. B. Warner won his fame.

"THE GRAY WOLF'S GHOST" will have its final showing at the Liberty tonight.

Doors open at 1.30 and 7:00 P. M.

SMILING REWARD FROM TICKLING ALASKA SOIL

"The richest agriculture, mining and livestock country in the world and with a population less than 65,000 for greater acreage than 20 of our 48 states, shows why Uncle Sam is directing attention to Alaska." "The soil there hasn't even been tickled yet," say experts who have studied conditions. "This photo shows vegetables grown on the Hardy homestead proving that climate, soil and farming equipment are as comfortable and more productive than some of our arid areas here."
