FORBID FIESTAS ON SACRED HOLIDAY

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 4.—A new municipal law forbids Mexicans to hold fiestas in cemeteries over the graves of their grandmothers or other relatives, as has been the annual practice of the poorer people on All Souls' Day. This action has been taken at the request of the church authorities.

For years one of the most popular holidays in the long calendar of such days in Mexico has been All Souls' Day which by regulation of the Catholic church is dedicated to the dead and as such should be observed as a solemn occasion. The poor class of native, however, had turned it into a day of hilarity and general rejoicing and it was no uncommon thing to find a happy group drinking pulque and singing songs over the grave of some dear and deceased relative.

The merry-making was stopped this year by order of the city council.

At the Theatres

What would a Rex Beach drama be without a conflict? Always there is a terrific clash of wills and often a physical fight comes in some part of the play. The wonderful battle in "The Spoilers" never will be forgotten, and in "The Auction Block" and "Heart of the Sunset" there was no lack of violent action, while in "Too Fat to Fight" of course the scenes of battle furnished excitement of another kind. Yet in "The Brand" Rex Beach declares that there is the strongest clash of all because the mental condition of the combatants is more acute. He has pictured his popular novel for Goldwyn and it comes to the Star Theatre beginning tonight.

The situation bringing about the fight in itself is unique. It involves characters strange to Alaskan scenes—a vaudeville actor and his girl partner from New York. She is miserable amid hardships of the Yukon and when the man fails to get her consent to accompany him into the heart of the country, he leaves her to whatever fate may befall her. She marries an old-timer—a man who has been seeking gold all his life. Soon she tires of him when she realizes that he can offer her none of the comforts of civilized life.

Manager Poole of the Liberty Theatre who is showing a series of Theda Bara and William Farnum pictures recently released by William Fox, announces that the attraction for today will be a Theda Bara super-production, "The Serpent." In richness of settings, in dramatic power and its appeal to women, this picture, according to Manager Poole, is not equalled by any he has shown this season.

The scene is laid in Russia on the estate of a former Grand Duke and involves the Duke's amorous interest in a beautiful peasant girl. He takes advantage of the girl's innocence and then, after a period during which she lives in luxury, casts her off. It is this that develops the serpent in the girl's nature. She goes to Paris, finds the Duke's son, and wins and marries him. When the other, not knowing of the marriage, visits his son, he renews his attention to the girl. They are discovered by the son, who commits suicide.

At the Liberty tonight.

"The Winning Stroke," starring George Walsh, hero of an thrilling Fox photoplays, is coming to the Liberty Theatre Friday and Saturday. It is a Yale story, filmed partly, it is announced, on the Yale campus, and presenting some wonderful photography of the Yale-Harvard boat race—one of the greatest events of college athletics. The story is one of intrigue, love and college pranks, and in the hands of George Walsh should give us something worth seeing.

Mint Jell

Try Mint Jiffy-Jell with roast lamb or cold meats. It is vastly better than mint sauce. Try Jiffy-Jell desserts with their real fruit flavors in essence form, in vials. Each is so rich in condensed fruit juice that it makes a real fruit dainty. Yet they cost no more than old-style gelatine desserts.

Spicy Advertising.
Charles Dudley Warner, who was connected for many years with the Courant of Hartford, Conn., once asserted that the colonial newspaper was a "broadside of state news with a moral essay attached." Whatever may be true of the news some of the advertisements in these old newspapers were rather interesting reading, or at least they are now. There was nothing very stale in this item inserted at regular rates in the New York Gazette in 1734:

"Whereas James Moore of Woodbridge has advertised in this Gazette as well as by Papers sent out and posted up, that his Wife, Deliverance, has eloped from his Bed and Board. These are to certify, that the Same is altogether false, for She has lived with Him above Eight years under His tyranny and incredible Abuses, for He has several times attempted to murder Her and also turned Her out of Doors, shamefully abusing Her, which is well known to the Neighbors and Neighborhood in Woodbridge."

Who Invented the Telephone?
The first patent for a practical telephone was granted to Alexander Graham Bell by the United States patent office in 1876, but Bell had a close rival for the honors in Elisha Gray of Boston, whose caveat for an invention "to transmit the tone of the human voice through a telegraphic circuit" was filed a few hours after the Bell application for a patent. Gray had described his invention in a paper communicated the previous year to the American Electrical society.

The Gray and Bell telephones were similar in many particulars, but after a memorable litigation the honor of the invention was awarded by the courts to Professor Bell. Gray contributed many other important inventions to mankind.
