at Weed, where he found "a woman named Jean, who is a sister of the underworld woman, Tessa, in Klamath Falls, Oregon, and another woman named Ruth, and that the woman named Dorothy, was then away from San Francisco on business," that Jean was drunk on contraband liquor and that she sold him beer and whiskey.

The affiant further said: "That affiant visited a house next door north of Jean's place in Weed, California, run by a woman named Violet, and other women named Babe, Edna and another woman whose name affiant did not learn; "That affiant visited a house north of the last mentioned house, run by a woman named Rachael, and that affiant found four underworld women in this said resort, and that the name of one of the women was Pearl. A 12-year-old boy is alleged to have emerged from the latter place. Liquors were sold liquor at once of the places.

The Duchess of Aosta, who would become Queen of Italy in the event of the abdication of King Victor Emmanuel and the succession of his cousin, the Duke of Aosta, to the throne, is one of the most remarkable women of European royalty. She is an Orleans princess, daughter of the late Count of Paris, and passed her girlhood in England, where her father was living in exile. The duchess is especially famous as a big game hunter. She has made many hunting trips to Abyssinia and the interior of Africa, spending weeks in the jungle, with no other companion than an English lady in waiting and the native attendants and guides.

If the Burmese husband and wife come to the conclusion that they are not suited to each other their procedure of divorce is simple and direct. The wife does not go to her lawyer, but to the tallow-chandler. From him she obtains two little candles. These she brings home, and she and her husband sit down at the floor, placing the candles between them. One candle represents the husband, one the wife. They are lighted at the same moment, and the owner of the one which goes out leaves the house, taking only his or her clothes, while the owner of the more enduring candle remains also the owner of the house and all that it contains.

HIGH HONORS PAID JUDGES

Imposing Ceremonies That Used to Mark Their Coming to the Various County Assizes.

The stately ceremonies which have attended the coming of an English judge to the county assizes, three times in each year, may be accounted for by the fact that the judge, on these occasions, represented the king, and for the time being was accorded courtesies not very different from those which would be offered the king himself.

In the quaint old city of Chester, which all traveling Americans know better, perhaps, than any city of England outside of London. It was the custom, before railroads were known, for the high sheriff of the county to meet the incoming judge with a body of men, armed with javelins, at the border of the county which he was leaving, in order to conduct him in safety to the place in which he was to reside during the term of the Cheshire court. This came to be a very imposing ceremony. On one occasion, 60 years ago, the office of high sheriff was filled by a baronet, who awaited the judge at the county borders with 18 javelin men, 40 servants, 100 tenants, his entire family (filling stately carriages), trumpeters in two detachments, two prominent editors in their carriages, and several of the county gentry.—Helen Marshall Pratt in St. Nicholas.

MUST TAKE TIME TO THINK

Scientist Explains Why Men Who Do Great Things Have to Have Abundant Leisure.

It was said by Helmholtz, on his seventieth birthday, according to Dr. Graham Lusk, in an address printed in Science, that a great idea had never come to him when he was at his desk, nor when he was tired, nor after taking a glass of wine, but usually when he was walking in the garden musing of other things. Dr. Lusk goes on: "The scientist must have leisure to think over the problems which offer and he must have a certain discrimination in order to distinguish between the things which are worth doing and those which are not. To do this requires a certain delay in action in order that plans may be matured. The individual who can not be happy unless he is at work at full power all the time is much less likely to accomplish successful scientific work than he who will not commence a research until he has satisfied himself that it is worth doing. It is not to be denied that this essential qualification of scientific life is frequently regarded with scorn by the busy practitioner of medicine, who gives himself no time either for thought or study."—Scientific American.

Be Master of Yourself.

To be able to keep cool when all the world goes mad shows mental grasp and genuine bigness. This grows with the years. It becomes a part of the nature. Newly dubbed aristocrats and the victims of sudden wealth usually betray their plebeian origin by their cultivated show of authority. Where the blood tells it rises with might to occasions, but seldom allows itself to get ruffled without occasion. And what a spectacle one can make of himself by getting all stewed about nothing or losing his temper on some little thing that approximates the zero mark. The really big character is slow to anger and irritates little dubs by his superior calm control. At the same time the exhibition of mastery challenges the secret admiration of all.

Mean Man.

"Why is Mrs. Gadder going home to her mother?" "She told Mr. Gadder she would like to make a little trip next summer—one that wouldn't cost more than $500."

"And what did Gadder say?" "The heartless brute replied: 'I see by the papers that the trolley car service is going to be improved.'—Birmingham Age-Herald.

All His Worldly Goods.

"Was your wife pleased with your raise in salary?" asked White. "I haven't told her yet, but she will be when she knows it," answered Brown. "How is it that you haven't told her?" "Well, I thought I would enjoy it myself a little while first."

All Dislike Red.

Red has been called the king of color. The bull is not the only creature that resents red; the elephant, the horse, the dog, the cock, are all alike in this respect. It is sufficient, for example, to cover the doors and skylights of a kennel with red material to cause incessant barking and commotion among the dogs confined therein. A spider and a wasp, confined in a glass case, are reported to have dwelt happily together until a red cloth was placed against the sides, when the insects tackled each other at once and a fight to the death ensued.

True Knowledge.

Knowledge is more than mere sagacity. Animals and savages display this in a remarkable degree. Real knowledge is due to familiarity with mental and physical properties. It knows the relations of materials and the reactions of their mutual contact. Knowledge is the child of experience and the product of mental digestion of facts. This takes time and toil. It submits the learner to situations and submissions the average man revolts from. That's why it is that few gain power. They are unwilling to pay the price of mental growth.
