WHERE FOSSIL BONES ABOUND

Corner of Nebraska Long Famous for its Skeletons of Queer Prehistoric Animals.

Where do the museums of the country get their strange and curious skeletons of prehistoric animals? If a skeleton is a "dinohyus" or a "moropus," one may be quite sure that it came from the farm of James Henry Cook in the northwest corner of Nebraska; and the chances are almost equally good if the specimen happens to be a saber-toothed cat or a many-toed horse, or almost any of those queer animals, that belong to the early Miocene period, says R. P. Crawford, in an article in Popular Science Magazine. Most ranchmen and farmers are quite content to raise the ordinary sort of stock, but here is a ranch that is most widely known because of its output of prehistoric animals. For more than a decade paleontologists from the great universities and museums of this country have made regular trips to these fossil quarries.

The Cook farm and ranch, located close to the Wyoming line, comprise some 15,000 acres. On the eastern edge of the ranch the Niobrara river has laid bare two hills, from both of which scores and scores of fossil skeletons have been quarried. In the summer it is no uncommon occurrence for representatives of half a dozen eastern institutions to pitch camp near these hills and spend several months digging out the fossil bones which, when worked over in the museum, form the queer-looking skeletons.

Some Quarantined

A physician was calling at a house where a child had the scarlet fever. "You keep the patient away from the rest of the children, I suppose," he remarked. "Oh, yes, indeed," was the mother's reply. "I don't let him come near the others except for meals."—Boston Evening Transcript.

Airplanes in Collision.

Losing the engine from his plane while flying at an altitude of a mile did not disconcert a young American airman while flying at an overseas field, according to Popular Mechanics Monthly. Collision with another craft tore the engine from his machine, but at a moment when the plane was gliding on an even keel, he climbed on to the top of the fuselage at full length and in some manner managed, by continually shifting to prevent the craft from fluttering into a direct fall. While maintaining balance with his body he also manipulated the controls and guided the machine earthward.

AGE STILL AT HELM ON OUR SHIP OF STATE

Age and experience are still at the helm in our national life, despite the challenges of youth for control. Congress may pass laws; the president may veto or sign but the Supreme Court judges have final say. Supreme Court justices serve until they die or voluntarily retire on full pay at the age of 70. The United States now has four justices over 70—and all are still serving. They are, Chief Justice White, 74; Justice McKenna, 76; Justice Holmes, 78, and Justice Day, 70.
