THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Prospective Ford Buyers Notice

A special letter from the Ford Motor Company announces nine hundred extra cars will be allotted to Oregon within the next thirty days. We would surely appreciate your order now so we can receive our portion of this allotment in Klamath territory and insure immediate delivery according to date of your order. Call in person or phone and we will be glad to explain our plan so everybody can have a Ford car with new starter equipment at once.

Don't overlook this opportunity, but place your order, even for a later delivery, so you won't have to wait when you really need your car.

We have the new starter and demountable wheels in stock which we can install on all late model cars. Windshield Cleaners, Weed Chains, Robes, H. & D. Shock Absorbers.

A new stock of accessories just in.

Let us overhaul your car while the snow is falling. Be ready when the sun shines.

PIGEONS WILL BE FIRE-FIGHTING AID

DENVER, Colo., Dec. 11.—Carrier pigeons are to be used by the United States forestry service next year to convey fire reports from look-out stations and "fire fighters at the front," to the national forest headquarters, according to an announcement made by the local offices of the department. The pigeons, and equipment of the navy department are to be used for this purpose. The value of the birds in the mountainous and lake regions where in many places travel is most difficult, and where there are but few telephone and telegraph lines, will be especially great, it is believed.

Flights of 600 miles in a single day have been made by these pigeons. The distance to be covered in the national forests are consider-ly less than this and in many cases the distance from look-out stations to the firefighting areas is less than fifty miles.

A Waiting Game.

"Suppose you wait here in this comfortable seat while I match these two samples of ribbon," said Mrs. Simson sweetly to her husband, who had been entrapped into going shopping with her.

When she came back she said contently: "Have I kept you waiting an unpardonable long time, you poor dear?"

"Oh, I haven't minded it," he said cheerfully. "I just jumped on a car and ran up to the football match, and then I took a little spin in Jack Dance's new car. Did you match the samples?"

"One of them. It's so provoking, I shall have to come in again tomorrow, for they are just closing the shop."—London Ideas.

The Kris Kringle Chariot

By EDITH RANSOM AVERILL

ROSY-cheeked school boy on his new red sled sped down the long snow-clad hill. A dozen gaily chattering girls tripped towards the lightly frozen pond with their skates. A farmer came into view with a wagon load of newly cut Christmas trees. Yuletide cheer was effervescent, but there was no responsive echo of its fervor in the hearts of John Lane and Martin Freer.

"I'm in accord with you completely," the latter was saying. "My son, Sidney, has the chance of his life to enter a law career in the city. Since he fell in love with your half niece and ward, Edna, he seems to have lost all ambition of making his way outside of winning her."

"A foolish fancy," declared John Lane. "Edna is too young to think of marrying."

"We are going to send Edna away to a private boarding school after the holidays," he continued, "and that will probably end the affair."

Meantime Edna Merrill pined in her prisonlike solitude and Sidney sought to devise a way to get word to her. At their last meeting he had said "no matter what comes, they shall not part us."

"They are going to send both of us away, widely apart," mourned Edna. "Oh, don't let them do it!" and Sidney replied, "Have you the faith to believe in me, to set with me without question if I find a way to defeat two old men, who have forgotten what love means?"

"I have given you my heart solely and trustingly," answered Edna stanchly.

"Then you shall hear from me when I have matured all my plans," promised Sidney.

There was a certain solace for Sidney in climbing the high garden wall at the rear of the Lane grounds and gazing up at the window of the room that held his heart's treasure. He had a note written detailing his plans and hopes, and he had almost despaired of delivering it, when, the afternoon before Christmas, he observed that the window was open.

Sidney added a few lines to the note, gathered up a handful of snow, enclosed the note in the white sphere, aimed, let fly and it passed through the open window.

The note had suggested the elopement he and Edna had previously discussed. He had added a line, "I will be in the lane at eight o'clock. Don't fall me."

There was a light in that upper window, now closed, when Sidney returned, and the lamp was set in a peculiar way. Across the frosted inside of a pane two words had been scratched, reading: "At eight."

A few minutes later the light was extinguished and a speeding figure crossed the garden, unlocked a rear door in the wall and the lovers were united.

"Quick," spoke Sidney. "It is a question of getting to a friend of mine, a clergyman at Amherst."

He clasped Edna's arm and they hurried down the lane.

The lane the fugitives were now in was deep with snow. As they neared a large barn within which showed a light Sidney drew Edna through its open door.

"We must hide for a spell," he said, and, as quite breathless, they entered the great rambling structure, they stared in amazement at a scene strange and striking.

In its center was what looked like an old circus chariot. There was gilt and holly and evergreen trimming in profusion. Four horses were attached and upon a sort of throne in the center was seated a gorgeously attired Santa Claus.

"We'll better start," spoke one of the men. "If we want to get to Amherst before everybody is abed," and catching sight of a sign on the chariot Sidney was made aware of the fact that to advertise a new soap this modern publicity van was touring the district, giving away samples as holiday presents.

"Step into that low space at the back," he whispered to Edna. "We shall be safe there."

When the unique Santa Claus vehicle arrived at the edge of Amherst, the fluttering lovers left it unnoticed. There was a hurried walk to the home of a clergyman.

The same telegram was sent by the happy bride and bridegroom to John Lane and Martin Freer. It read:

"Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Freer wish their loving friends a Merry, Merry Christmas."

FIVE CENTS IS PRO RATA FOR MERCY SEALS

A short time ago Mrs. J. H. Garrett was appointed chairman for Klamath County for the sale and distribution of Red Cross seals, the proceeds of which are to be used in the fight against tuberculosis throughout this country.

Part of the money realized from the local sales will in all probability be expended in Klamath county, for under the present plans of the management, a trained nurse is to be sent to Klamath shortly after the first of the year, whose duty it will be to examine carefully into local conditions and to aid and assist those who may be afflicted. If necessary such persons will be furnished transportation and sent to one of the many camps maintained by the Red Cross society for the care of persons suffering from the disease. Many times those in the early stages are permanently cured after brief treatment, and substantial and definite relief is given even the malignantly developed cases.

Mrs. Garrett has as her assistants in this work, Mrs. Fred C. Murphey, who is chairman for Yamama Falls, and who is assisted by Mrs. Horace Shidler, a returned Red Cross nurse, Mrs. C. E. Burton and Miss Maud Carlton.

These ladies are planning to have booths erected in the various local stores at which purchases of the seals may be made. Already the dry goods and drug stores are co-operating in this drive and have the seals on sale.

The quota for Klamath County is $500, and in order to meet this assignment, it will be necessary for every man, woman and child in the county to invest the tremendous sum of five cents in this life saving work.

The Herald would bring good cheer from Klamath County; not only during the Christmas season, but during every day in the year, Shop Early.
