SMELTER PROOF CROPS NEEDED

DOUGLAS, Ariz., Dec. 11.—Selection of crops that will resist smelter smoke has made Dr. A. W. Vanneman a successful farmer in spite of the handicaps that face residents of mining towns.

Dr. Vanneman has not only looked after the health of the community, but he has also conducted independent investigation in crops so that he can give many professional farmers pointers.

"Asparagus, onions, cabbage, cauliflower and sweet potatoes are the best crops for this district," he said. "This year I had in twenty acres of Avondale maize which did well until the smelter smoke hit it. Then I had a third of a crop."

"I had a large tract of Japanese honey sorghum which proved smoke resistant. Black amber cane did well and so did Milo maize. We had a good crop of corn. Tomatoes were poor."

"I have one tract of three acres which I first planted in Irish potatoes, which failed to develop. About the last of June I planted barley on the same acreage and got a good crop. After harvesting this I planted millet in August and got a good crop."

Doctor Vanneman said, "Peaches survive the smoke, though apples and pears do not do well. Wells dug on the ranch irrigate the place."

Do not delay. Get one of those 10-acre tracts of tule land, now on the market for a short time. See R. E. Smith, 517 Main St 11-1t

Stefansson Compares Him With the Fox, to the Disadvantage of the Smaller Animal

The wisdom of the fox is not so evident as the saying is widespread, but the more I see of wolves the more respect I have for their intelligence, which is unique among the nonhuman inhabitants of the North.

The second day on the new land I met a wolf that came running toward me at first, for he could not fall to mistake me at a distance for a caribou, but when he got within two hundred yards and could see more plainly he realized my strangeness and, what is truly remarkable, inferred that I might be dangerous. This wolf could certainly never have seen a human being before, and the only dark thing of size comparable to mine that he had ever seen must have been either a caribou or a muskox. The caribou are his prey, and while he seldom kills a muskox he at least has no reason to fear that exceptionally clumsy and slow-moving animal.

But at two hundred yards this wolf paused and, after a good look that satisfied him that I was something new in his experience, commenced to circle me at that distance to get my wind. When he got it it took him off at top speed. The similarly unsophisticated foxes of this region will commonly run within ten or fifteen yards of you and follow you around for miles, barking like a toy dog following a pedestrian.—Vilhjalmur Stefansson in Harper's Magazine.

EXERCISE MAY BE OVERDONE

Nature's Signals to Desist Should Be Heeded by Those Who Would Preserve Health.

"Pursued ostensibly to promote personal welfare, physical exercise is not infrequently carried to a point of overdoing, which results in injury rather than benefit," says the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Commenting on some observations made on aviators, it says the test of the value of an exercise lies in the physiological adjustments that it induces. "If the heart reduces its rate of beating and is less sensitive to exercise, the training is commendable. Training should make the heart and other muscles better and endure fatiguing exercises better than the untrained heart does. Consequently, if the heart reacts excessively as a result of work; if there is a rapid rise in pulse rate, which returns to its normal only after a long interval, the fundamental aim of exercise for health has not been accomplished. The symptoms of an overworked mechanism are at hand. However advantageous vigorous training may be in the great majority of cases, failure to adjust to the increased demand of work is always a signal to desist and an indication that other modes of perfecting the organism should be sought."

BOOKMARKS OF EVERY KIND

Strip of Bacon About the Most Unique That Des Moines Librarian Has Yet Found.

The most startling marker that Forest B. Spaulding, public librarian of Des Moines, Iowa, has come across in the books that have circulated from the library was a strip of underdone bacon. The most ordinary bookmark found in the books is the common variety of wire hairpin. Hairpins might be collected by the hundreds. Mr. Spaulding says, but owing to that very fact they are considered as fairly worthless from the collector's standpoint.

The vacation season is announced annually by the presence of snapshots in the returned books. These are both personal or otherwise in character, Postcards and letters, too, come in often. Frequently letters addressed and stamped are found just as they were left by the book borrower who doubtless was proceeding postofficeward by way of the library. These are mailed from the library.

Mr. Spaulding has noticed a number of pretty girls sitting on the bench at Riverview Park with books, and he has been looking forward all summer to recovering a bathing suit absent mindedly left by one of the young ladies in her book.
