CHILDREN.

David Starr Jordan says: "There is nothing in all the world so important as little children; nothing so interesting. If you wish to go in for philanthropy, if ever you wish to be of any use in the world, do something for little children. If ever you yearn to be truly wise, study children. We can dress the sore, bandage the wound, imprison the criminal, heal the sick and bury the dead, but there is always a chance that we can save the child. If the great army of philanthropists ever exterminate sin and pestilence, ever work out the race's salvation, it will be because a little child has led them."

KOREANS ARRESTED.

HONOLULU, Nov. 21. (By Mail) Three thousand Koreans, men, women and children, were arrested by the Japanese in Korea, between October 1 and 15 last, according to advices received by Y. W. Seung, editor of the Korean National Herald, published here.
In the Japanese army and police force occupying Korea there are 100,000 men, according to Seung's advices.

Among the Hindoos marriage is arranged entirely by the parents. Courtship is literally unknown, and the persons who are united in wedlock remain perfect strangers to each other until their nuptial day. Everything is settled to suit the fancies or caprices of the parents.

COMET VISIBLE.

MEXICO CITY Dec. 12.—The director of the Central Observatory here states that he has seen the new comet recently discovered by the Japanese astronomer Sasakki, and that it is clearly visible every night after seven o'clock. This is the fifth new comet reported during the past year.

TO TUNNEL CHANNEL.

LONDON Nov. 28.—(By Mail)—Political objections to the tunnel under the English channel have been removed. Final decision as to the commencement of the work now rests with the War office.
This was ascertained by a private deputation which visited the Prime minister.

USE FOR LUMINOUS PAINT

Material Found Almost Invaluable in War Might Also Be Well Employed in Peace.

Here is a wartime application of luminous paint that should be useful in summer camps, on the hikes of boy scouts, in "peacetime maneuvers of citizen soldiers, in marking the landing places of aircraft, etc.

The British army had disks or buttons two or three inches in diameter, coated with luminous paint and having a sharp spike on the under side. These were stuck upon the sides of trenches, buildings, fences, etc., or were swung by hand to give signals in the well-known code where bright lights were dangerous or where silence was golden.

The luminous disks were visible from 30 to 60 feet, so they formed valuable landmarks. Luminous ribbon also was used for marking trails through the woods, and luminous patches were attached to the backs of stretcher bearers to prevent them from being fired upon by their own troops.

The Fanciulla d'Anzio.

One of the gifts that President Wilson received in Italy was a silver model of the statue known as the Fanciulla d'Anzio, presented to him by the Roman municipality. The original is a Greek statue, discovered not long ago at the villa of Nero, in the seaport town of Anzio, near Rome, and purchased by the Italian government for 450,000 lire. Admirers of art and students of archeology had traveled from all over Europe to see it, and the youthful draped figure, carrying a plecter from which the object it long ago held had been broken, was named the Maid of Anzio. Then somebody noticed that the long robe was lifted a little, as if to avoid tripping over it, that the biceps muscle of the bare arm was more boyish than girlish, and so on, until modern judgment has decided that the title Fanciulla d'Anzio is a misnomer, and that the unknown sculptor was really modeling the figure of a handsome youth performing some service in an ancient temple.

Bran Muffins.

Roger W. Babson of the department of labor said at a dinner in Washington:

"Speaking of labor, it has been a tough job to eat some of the health foods that were turned out during the war.

"A young lady said to a young man at a Washington dance:

"Are you the same young man who ate so many of my bran muffins at the Red Cross last fall?"

"No," he answered, "and what's more, the doctor says I never will be."

HE ROSE TO THE OCCASION

Teacher Insisted That Norman Should Write Poetry, and Result Was Remarkable Effusion.

The sophomore class at N— high school had a genius for a teacher. She could write poetry and every Friday required her pupils to do the same. Norman could play baseball, but poetry was outside his ken. Still the teacher insisted that he do it, and finally issued as her ultimatum that he either write it or she would mark him failure on his monthly report. A failure mark meant that the team would lose one of its best players, so Norman tried to write a poem. His attempt was so wretched that his teacher tried sarcasm.

"You are a genius," she told him. "Now see if you can't write a poem about yourself and your wonderful abilities."

Later she found Norman's effort in his memorandum book, but she has kept the finding a secret. For he had written:

Lives of school teachers all remind us
That they'd better get a man.
And departing leave behind them
Fewer nuisances if they can.

Devoted Nurse's Death.

The story of a nurse's devotion in France was told by Maj. Gen. Cuthbert Wallace at a meeting convened by the London national council of women to consider shorter hours for hospital staffs.

"There was," said the general, "a certain hospital in France where the German bombers were coming over night after night. Some people get restless when they know that bombs may be dropped on them. The wounded man—although he was practically indifferent to shell fire—in a hospital very often gets seized with this horrible fear, this inability to keep still. There was a certain nurse who was looking after a ward in which there was a man who was bedridden and could not get out of the way. She had gone off duty one evening when these bombers came over. She knew of this man and went back to her ward. She was not on duty, but she sat at this man's bed and sang to him. A bomb fell. That woman was killed, but the man was left. The name of this heroic nurse was not revealed.
