WHY OREGON LAGS.

Here's a sample of the propaganda that has left Oregon twenty years behind its neighbors in the development of the Pacific Coast states. It's the stuff that has made Oregon a state with one city, where Washington on the north, and California on the south can point to a dozen and a score surpassing in size Oregon's largest town outside Portland. Oregon has one really metropolitan city, the other states can boast at least three each. Right here, from the editorial columns of the Oregon Journal, is the reason:

Portland, per capita is one of the richest cities in America. It has bigger and stronger banks than any other city in the Northwest. It has banking resources that far overtop those of any other city in the Northwest.

In the financial supremacy to pass? What else will it do but pass if Portland does not back it up with that enterprise on which wealth grows?

Take a look at the trade of the Pacific: Alaska, Hawaii and the Philippines bought and sold in 1918 about $250,000,000 in products, according to the Portland Chamber of Commerce Bulletin. Of this, Portland got a negligible portion. Most of what we did get came through rival ports. There is not a single distance advantage against Portland in reaching either of these great markets. The Orient bought and sold to America during 1918 $1,200,000,000 in products. Portland's share was woefully small, humiliatingly small.

We can get a great deal more of this business. We have seen in the preliminary report in the Columbia river case what we can do if we fight. Just as The Journal was right all along in urging the principle that has been recognized it has been, and is right in insisting that if Portland will try she can win a big share in this Pacific trade and that in winning it huge benefit will come to Portland and Oregon in expanded industries, enlarged commerce and accelerated prosperity.

The main problem is ships. If ships are made available, men here or men to come, will load them with cargo. If government ships are not obtainable, Portland has riches enough to build fleets of vessels and never miss the money. And the ships would make rich Portland richer than ever.

Of course the tall does not wag the dog, and of course a man cannot lift himself by the boot-strap, but Portland goes calmly on, from generation to generation, assuming that these absurdities can be accomplished.

Seattle, Spokane and Tacoma long ago learned that to develop, a city requires first the development of the state. Los Angeles and San Francisco, Oakland and San Diego join hands in advertising the resources of California.

Does Portland? With a true Bourbon spirit, never forgetting, never learning, she chases the will-o-the-wisp of foreign trade, and the richest empire in the world lies at her back door, undeveloped.

A huge benefit will never come to "Portland and Oregon," from any source whatever. But undreamed of wealth will come to Oregon and Portland, if the latter can be jarred loose from her ego and made to realize that it is not from foreign shores that destiny will appear to crown her as a mistress of world trade, but from the fields and forests of her own domain—which, developed to their full extent and with sufficient rail connections would give Portland the commercial pre-eminence she craves so much.

The main problem is not ships, as the Journal says, but railroads. If railroads are built to bring the wealth of the interior valleys to the wharves of Portland, then the ships will come from the seven seas as surely as steel comes to a magnet. If Portland has riches to burn in building ships, none will deny her the privilege of spending it in that foolish fashion, but it will be cheaper, wiser and altogether more conducive of her dreams of dominance if she will use it for building railroads first. The ships will be forthcoming.

PLEDGE SUPPORT TO HOME NEWSPAPER

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, Corvallis, Jan. 16.—In recognition of the part the newspaper plays in developing community life and realizing the difficult position the newspapers of the country occupy at this time because of the newsprint shortage, the county agricultural agents unanimously adopted a resolution pledging the newspapers of the country their full support.

One of the ways in which they decided to help local papers is by aiding them in securing commercial advertising and by refraining from carrying competitive advertising in the columns of the farm bureau publications. C. J. McIntosh, editor of the press bulletins, addressed the county agents on how to help the papers by interesting local dealers in the projects advocated by the farm bureau.

JAPANESE PUPILS WANT CITIZENSHIP

HONOLULU, T. H., Jan. 16.—Every pupil born in Hawaii and enrolled in grades 5, 6, 7, and 8 of the public schools of North Kohala, Island of Hawaii, has declared his intention to become an American citizen, according to the report of Bertha Ben Taylor, supervising principal.

It also was announced that the children all had made their declarations with the consent of their parents, and that the Japanese consul general at Honolulu had been asked to take the steps necessary to have them released from all allegiance to the Japanese Emperor.

In this connection the Japanese-American residents of the islands recently petitioned the Japanese government to release them from the control of the Japanese dual citizenship laws, and sent a request to President Wilson that he also bring their desires to the attention of the government at Tokio.

TWO IN ONE

For the middle-aged or elderly person who requires one pair of glasses for reading and another pair for out-of-door use, we recommend our Invaluable Bifocal or double vision glasses.

They are really two pairs of glasses in one—two lenses fused together without any visible joining. There is no prominent seam or joint to tell the public that the wearer is "getting along in years."

With our Invaluable Bifocals even your closest friends cannot detect that you are wearing double vision glasses. Call and see them.
