ARE YOU ENUMERATED?

The day has come when there must be a final "sweeping up" of those who have not been enumerated in the census of residents of Klamath Falls. There are a few—let us hope very few—who may have been missed by the enumerators, but this oversight can be corrected now, and only now, if those who have not been visited by the enumerators will take the trouble to call up 190W. This is the telephone number of Mrs. Anna Watson. The last of the books are still in her possession and she has authority from the census supervisor of the state to continue the enumeration for a little while longer.

Every city, town and hamlet throughout the nation had a certain pride to show a decided increase in growth and Klamath Falls should not be an exception. It should not have within its boundaries a single person who is not interested in seeing that this city is 100 percent complete in the census. If you have not been included in this census you must certainly know it and it becomes your civic duty to take steps to have your name listed. This you can do by calling Mrs. Watson, stating where and when she can find you and she will call upon you. You are in no way inconvenienced and if you fail to do this in behalf of the welfare of your own home town, then you had better keep still about it when the population of the city is announced. There is no question but that most of us are going to be disappointed in the count, just as we were disappointed ten years ago, but let us do the best we can to make the number as large as it should be. For the next day or two let the question be "Are you enumerated?" and if you find anyone who has not been, then do your duty and see that he or she is counted.

ENGLISH EXPORT TRADE GROWING

SUNDERLAND, Eng., Jan. 21. (By Mail).—An optimistic statement regarding the trend of affairs in this country was made by Winston Churchill, Secretary of State for War, in a speech here. Mr. Churchill said:

"Our export trade is growing month by month in value and in volume. Orders are flowing into almost all the great industries, not only from the home market, but from overseas."

"Our expenditure is diminishing rapidly. The expenditure of the departments which I control will be less by the enormous sum of 400,000,000 pounds at the end of the year than it was at the end of last year. The revenue also shows steady expansion."

"We are on the high road to recovery from the injuries and the retardation of the war and to consolidation of the great position won by the prowess of our soldiers in the field. But there is on condition. We must all work together during the period of reconstruction."

RODENT DRIVE IS ON IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Feb. 6.—The people of the United Kingdom, young and old, have embarked on another vigorous campaign against rats with the beginning of the new year, under the provisions of the rats and mice act. This law compels the occupants of land to keep their premises free of these rodents, a penalty of £5 being provided for failure to do so. The law applies also to ships in port.

AT THE THEATERS

Small town life was too dull and uninteresting for Betty Standish when she attained her twenty-first birthday and came into possession of her father's fortune. The big city called to her and she answered its summons. But in the same large city dwelt a young man who was untried with the gay life and the endless grind of social obligations to which he was forced by his position. So while Jerome Kent left his sumptuous bachelor quarters in New York to seek solace in the mountains, Betty moved into his apartments, the transaction being accomplished by a valet who saw a chance to earn an "honest" dollar. Circumstances cause Kent to return home unexpectedly, and he is perplexed to find evidences of feminine habitation all over his bachelor chambers. The plot thickens a few moments later, when Betty and her aunt return from the theatre, find a strange man in the apartment, and mistake him for a burglar. And thus begins an almost endless chain of amusing complications and thrilling adventures involving society matrons, the debutantes, crooks, real and imaginary, and all the rest of the motley array of characters that appear in "Under Suspicion," the Universal photoplay, announced for today at the Liberty Theatre.

"Under Suspicion," features Ora Carey, supported by Forrest Stanley, Charles Clay, Frank MacQuarrie, Blanche Rose, Frank Thompson, Burwell Hamrick, Andrew Waldron and Cora Drew. It was written by Mildred Condit and produced by William C. Dowlan.

A certain rich man's daughter saw her father's valet reading a book. "Is it interesting?" she asked. "Quite," he replied, offering her the volume. "It was given to me by the best servant in the city."

On the fly leaf she read an inscription from her father. "But my father is not a 'servant,'" she objected.

"We are all servants," answered the valet. "Your father may be a millionaire, but he is a servant—as I have said, a good one."

Events testified to the truth. The millionaire, in a desire to give his city better service in public utilities, became mayor. He was the instrument by which a great strike was settled. He drew closer capital and labor by establishing the profit sharing system. He made his valet his chief secretary and aide.

And did the valet marry the rich man's daughter? He—well, see Frank Keenan in the new Pathe picture, "The World Aflame," which comes to the Liberty Theatre beginning Sunday. There you can watch the entire courtship, the culmination and the new-thought relationship of capital and labor all at once.

PRICE INCREASE
RENEWS OIL BOOM

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 6.—The advance in the price of Pennsylvania crude oil to $5 a barrel will result in the widest search for petroleum this section has known since the early days of the "oil excitement," according to authorities in the industry here.

Already it has started, and leases are being taken on territory which was drilled over more than half a century ago and then abandoned for more productive fields. Drilling has been commenced in some of these leases, and results have been so good as to encourage others. One field in Allegheny county, abandoned in the early seventies because the one well drilled proved to be a "duster," has produced a number of wells the past few months.

"The greater part of this development will be in western Pennsylvania and West Virginia," explained the head of a large corporation, which has been developing oil territory for many years. "When oil was only a dollar a barrel one had to bring in a good well before he had a paying proposition. Now with oil at $5 a barrel it pays to drill a lot of wells, even though they only produce a barrel or two a day. We reduce expenses by connecting these small wells to one power plant, and pumping them very thoroughly. While the initial cost of drilling is high, about three times as much as in the old days, economies of operation and the princely price of crude, make hunting for the Pennsylvania grade a pretty profitable investment."

The companies engaged in this work are usually old-time organizations, which have not stock for sale and which cover thoroughly with leases all the territory in the immediate neighborhood of their operations.

WHAT AN OMELET!

PASADENA, Cal., Feb. 6.—With an egg weighing four pounds—enough for a meal for eight persons—Martha Washington, a veteran egg-producer at an ostrich farm here, has opened the season.

She is the most reliable egg-layer among the more than 300 ostriches at the farm, and for many years has been the first each season to lay an egg.

The business of tea-blending is peculiarly British. For more than one hundred years Mincing Lane has blended tea for the whole world and brought the work into the region of an exact science.
