ISLANDERS STOP SUNDAY WORK PLAN

LONDON, Feb. 9. (By Mail.)—Lord Leverhulme has encountered the religious prejudices of the Scotchman who live on the extensive property he has purchased in the Outer Hebrides and has suffered a rebuff. He had planned to make Stornoway, on the island of Lewis, the headquarters of a huge fishing fleet that should sweep the seas for 500 miles around. The project involved Sunday labor and the islanders who adhere to the strict and in-

Attention, Mr. General Public

We are prepared to handle that piece of business property, residential property, or farm lands for you. If you have anything in this line that you want to SELL, and the price is right, you cannot do better than to tell us about it. We'll find Mr. Buyer.

If you want to BUY anything in this line, tell us. We'll find what you want at a price that will suit you.

If it's money you need, we have money to loan on your house, or the house you would like to build. Come in for particulars.

tense form of the Presbyterian faith, rejected it.

Commenting on the incident, the periodical, COMMON SENSE, says: "Lord Leverhulme is a man of big ideas and new ideas while the population over whom he has declared the rights of lordship are folk of old and intense ideas. Hence the inevitable collision."

LAST HORSE DRAWN ENGINE IN MUSEUM

AT THE THEATERS

One of the amusing incidents that happened when Martin Johnson arrived at Tulagi: The natives there in the majority do not wear any clothes whatever. It was necessary that they put on something before making their debut before the camera. Mr. Johnson had brought along a lot of cloth stuffs, hats, etc., and passed these out to the savages he wanted to photograph. Through an interpreter he made his wants known and the natives then retired behind trees to dress themselves. When they made their appearance they were dressed with a breech cloth and a hat, the coats, shirts and trousers they would have nothing to do with. A cannibal's idea of being a Beau Brummel is to be dressed from the neck up.

Tulagi was the first stop Martin Johnson made on his trip to the South Seas; that it can be justly called a white spot in a black land is because twelve white men have settled there to carry on a trading business with the natives, over 500 in number. While Tulagi has all the charms and beauties of the tropics it is hard to understand that a white man would take up his home in a land where each day may spell death from the savages.

"Tulagi" will be seen at the Liberty tonight.

Excitement aplenty, mystery, too, and preception and reasoning of the highest order—all these are to be found in "The Silkless Banknote," the first of a series of eight two-reelers made by Republic from the most gripping incidents in the life of William J. Flynn, former chief of the U. S. Secret Service, which will be shown at the Liberty theatre tonight. Herbert Rawlinson takes the role of "Lightning," Flynn's best man. The story has to do with a counterfeiter who makes an almost perfect five-dollar bank note. Under the microscope, however, it is disclosed that instead of silk in the texture of the paper fabric there is hair. But it is not human hair. How "Lightning" discovers the kind of hair used, where it came from and the crook himself who turned murderer, make as absorbing a tale as ever has been filmed.

Best yet—Herald Want Ads.

The blue whales of the Antaretic ocean amuse themselves by traveling in "schools" and simultaneously jumping out of the water at intervals of half a minute, so that their entire length may be seen above the sea.

Like our own leap year, every third year in China is longer than its predecessors, but the Chinese add a whole month, instead of an extra day.
