WILL MAP MEXICAN BORDER FROM AIR

EL PASO, Tex., Mar. 17.—Air maps of the Arizona-Mexican border will be made by the army air service reconnaissance branch as soon as landing fields for camera-airplanes are located and charted, according to announcement at Fort Bliss. Preliminary work already is under way. Long stretches of the border are mountainous, cut by deep ravines and gulches that cross the border and the terrain is said to be extremely difficult to survey and map in the ordinary way. After photographs of the line have been taken from airplanes, the negatives are to be reduced to a uniform scale and joined. This is said to result in a map not only wholly accurate, but which will show features of the terrain that engineers surveying from the ground would be almost certain to miss.

HOMESTEAD LANDS DECLARED WORTHLESS

PORTLAND, Mar. 18.—The Association of Fathers of Soldiers and Sailors has adopted a resolution warning ex-service men not to come west for the purpose of settling on the lands opened for settlement within the Oregon & California grant in Western Oregon. The lands were characterized as "untillable and undesirable for any purpose whatsoever and practically of no value." The conduct of Captain Conville of the American Legion in the matter was commended as in the interest of protecting the ex-soldiers in the matter.

It was further held in the resolution that the publicity given to the opening of the lands to settlement with preference rights to veterans is being used as propaganda circulated for the purpose of defeating the bonus to which our boys are justly entitled.

The committee report on constitution and by-laws for placing the organization on a permanent basis for continuing its work was received and adopted. The principal discussion of the evening centered upon the resolution, and views of members as to the character and desirability of the lands within the railroad grant that have been thrown open.

WON'T KEEP KIDS AWAY FROM GAME.

WICHITA, Kas., Mar. 18.—While there is considerable discussion among baseball managers the country over as to the advisability of letting the small boys into the game either free or at reduced admissions, Frank Iabell, owner of the Wichita Western league team announced that he intended to continue the plan he has maintained for several years of letting boys up to 12 years old in free.

"The kids of today are the fans of tomorrow," he explained. "I'm strong for the kids. They are the real fans."

SAYS NOW GOOD TIME TO BUILD

That this is a good time to build and that the prices of lumber are to stay up is the opinion of A. S. Chappell expressed in an article published in Salesman and Trader. He states that the price of lumber now is high only in comparison to prewar prices which are gone for good and all, and goes on to show that the high prices are due to causes which will not be removed. The writer gives the reasons for the higher prices as follows:

"Standing lumber is growing scarcer every year. While there is much misinformation, such as you have read in articles which apparently demonstrate that fifty years from now there won't be a tree standing in North America, the fact remains that timber is being cut, manufactured and destroyed by forest fire at a tremendous rate and replaced to only a slight degree by reforestation, which is now in its infancy.

"It is true of the actual stand of timber and is especially true when one considers timber that is available economically. By this we mean that every year it costs more to produce lumber as the logs have to be hauled a greater distance to the mills. Only a few years ago the millman hauled his logs but a short distance, perhaps five or ten miles, while now he builds costly logging roads and hauls it fifty or sixty miles and in some cases one hundred miles, it naturally seems a tremendous added expense."

Turn to Pacific Coast
The writer shows how other parts of the country have been cleared of timber and that the country now looks toward the Pacific coast for supply. He writes:

"Pacific coast lumber is now in brisk demand as far east as New England and manufacturers, who a few years ago were glad to sell their products in this district, now have a choice of markets. At the same time the general production of lumber in the United States is falling off. The decline is startling."

Total Cut Decreases
Figures are given to show the cut in the United States for the next ten years. The total cut in 1909 was 44,500,000,000 feet. It fell down to $2 billion feet in 1919. The writer continues:

"The increased demands for west coast lumber products which are expected to satisfy the needs of this district and the decreased general production in the country—these two conditions combined can have only one result—increased values."

The increase in the cost of labor and material is also given as additional cause of the high prices of lumber. He states that the country is short one million homes and can predict only high prices for next year.

TEREDO DAMAGE TO WHARVES, $150,000

MARTINEZ, Cal., Mar. 18.—Ravages of the teredo, a worm which bores into and consumes submerged wood, has resulted in the destruction of two big wharves here and thousands of dollars of damage to others, according to L. G. Metcalf, superintendent of the Union Oil Company here and James Bulger, agent of the Southern Pacific Company at Port Costa.

Recently a 1,000 foot wharf of the Union Oil Company and a 330 foot wharf of the Southern Pacific Company collapsed, and the remnant of these structures had to be towed on the mud flats in order that they would not be a menace to navigation, the officials said. Investigations are being conducted as to the fitness of concrete and creosoted piles to take the place of the present type of piles in all future wharves in this district, they said.

Big wharves of other industries are threatened, according to these
