The Japanese have a pretty custom of celebrating the blossoming of the fruit trees by a general holiday.

Antipodes island, not far from New Zealand, was thus named because it is directly opposite to London. The Chinese boil all their food instead of baking it—or, if baked at all, it is browned after boiling.

For "small change" in Abyssinia blocks of salt are commonly used.

G.O.P.—United—Democrats Split

BY SCOTT C. BONE.

Republican National Convention—Chicago, June 8.
Democratic National Convention—San Francisco, June 28.

Thus have the two great parties made preliminary arrangements for the quadriennial political contest of 1920.

Only in the ease with which they reached decisions as to the places and dates of holding the conventions did the initial proceedings of the two National Committee meetings resemble each other in the least. In all other respects they were wholly at variance.

Unity, Confidence and Unanimity marked the Republican National Committee meeting at Washington on December 10-11. Its sessions were animated by a spirit of party enthusiasm, determination and loyalty, and an entire absence of party factionalism, which at once bespoke and foretold the winning of the battle of good government soon to come. By common expression and assent this gathering was pronounced the most successful of the kind held in a quarter of a century. And it was rendered all the more significant by the fact that political precedent and tradition were disregarded in not waiting upon the party in power to lead off with its campaign plans.

Discord, Third-Term Fear, White House Domination and an Open Breach signalized the Democratic National Committee meeting and the Jackson Day celebration at Washington on January 8. An announcement by Woodrow Wilson that he would not be a candidate for re-election—expected, hopefully, prayerfully awaited by the assembled hosts—did not come. Instead, a message reached the party faithful, condemning the United States Senate for daring to exercise its treaty-making functions and virtually commanding that the Versailles treaty, with the proposed League of Nations covenant, as brought back from Paris by the President, be submitted to referendum and made the paramount issue in the impending campaign—an issue upon which he would nationally become the one and only logical Democratic candidate.

Again was exemplified "The State, I Am."

To this White House edict or decree the once Peerless Leader, William Jennings Bryan, who, thanks to the operation of the two-thirds rule in the Baltimore convention of 1912, contrived to name the party's present standard bearer, gave a thunderous rejoinder of No. He enjoined upon the Democrats at the banquet tables the urgent, imperative, inescapable duty of a compromise on the treaty, by way of reservations and its ratification without further unnecessary delay. And to the Nebraska's thunderous No many of those present, secretly or openly, uttered a fervent Amen.

So the Democratic gathering at Washington produced rival leaders and made manifest a party split. Shall the leader be Woodrow Wilson or William Jennings Bryan? Is the Democratic party to pass and give place to a Wilsonian party? These are questions which the Jackson Day dinner evolved and left unanswered.

A State's Rights issue, involving Old Sumptuary, has also developed to add to the troubles of the Democratic party. The New York World, foremost Democratic organ and pro-Wilson in all things, demands that the party go on record in denunciation of national prohibition and pledge its efforts to nullify the constitutional amendment. Failing to do this, the World bluntly declares that the Democratic party is eternally and forever damned. The President's veto of the prohibition enforcement act gives the anti high hopes that this State's Right issue will prevail.

Meanwhile, the Republican party, harmonious and solidified as it has not been since the Roosevelt campaign of 1904, is confidently looking ahead and going ahead.

SOLOMON ON VERMONT BENCH

Decision Handed Down by Judge
Some Generations Ago Remarkable for Many Reasons.

A singular compound of law, good sense and sarcasm characterized Judge Keyes, one of the early Vermont judges.

A disconsolate-looking tramp was once convicted before Judge Keyes of the larceny of the boots of United States Senator Dudley Chase. The judge addressed him as follows:

"You are a poor creature and ought to have known better than to steal. Only rich men can take things without paying for them. And then you must steal in the great town of Windsor, and the boots of a great man like Senator Chase, the greatest man anywhere around. If you wanted to steal why didn't you steal in some little town in New Hampshire and the boots of some man who wasn't of any consequence?"

"And then you must steal from him when he was on his way to Washington and perhaps the only boots he had. You might have compelled him to wait until some shoemaker made him another pair, and shoemakers never keep their promises. And perhaps by the delay some important treaty might have failed of ratification because he was not present in the senate."

"I have got to say that you seem to know a darned deal more about stealing boots than what I do!" piped the prisoner.

"That is a sound observation," he said. "I will give you only one month in the county jail, and that not so much for stealing as for your ignorance in not knowing better than to steal the boots of a great man like Senator Dudley Chase."

Made a Mistake.

We ate that evening in the kitchen. In a bedroom, off the dining room, slept our two-year-old boy. In that room, in a drawer of the dresser was a box containing all of my jewelry.

When my husband had finished his dinner he made his way to the front part of the house and while doing so, he ran squarely into a man. He asked the man what he was doing there, and the man answered: "Pardon me, sir, but I'm a piano tuner, but I think I've made a mistake."

My husband turned on the light, and there, a little satchel in his hand, bowing and apologizing, stood a slim, fair-haired, innocent-looking individual. My husband kept on berating him, and I, somewhat ashamed of him, begged him not to be so hard on a man, who had made a mistake and seemed truly sorry for it.

Finally, amidst more bowing and profuse apologies, the man took his departure. We found out later that the shabby little tuner's satchel contained the contents of my jewel case. He had left me my wedding ring because it was on my finger.—Chicago Tribune.

FRENCH DEMAND THE USE OF TRADEMARKS

PARIS, Mar. 20. (By Mail).—Importers of American machinery have become aroused by the prospects that the French parliament may enact a law requiring that all foreign products, raw or manufactured, imported into France must be marked or labeled with the name of the country showing where it was produced. Importers of American, Canadian and English harvesting machines say this law would seriously affect them and that it would be impossible to mark as required all the spare parts of machines shipped from those countries to France.

The American and British chambers of commerce and the Importers' union have appealed to the finance minister to make an exception in favor of harvesting and sewing machines. The law is still pending in parliament, the two houses having failed thus far to agree on its provisions.
