War Risk Checks Ten At a Time

Uncle Sam established the world's largest insurance institution when 13,000 persons were given positions in the War Risk Bureau, home of which is shown above. At the top is shown a machine which writes checks, working full time every day. Already over 4,000,000 checks have been sent out. Below is shown J. L. Bets, who signs ten checks at a time. Since the organization of the bureau over 20,000,000 checks have been sent relatives or dependents of our soldiers. Four branches are housed here: Allotment and allowance, compensation, war risk insurance, and marines and seamen's insurance.

Noted Author of "The Westerners" Big Game Hunter

Major Stewart Edward White Holds World's Lion-Shooting Record

Major Stewart Edward White, author of "The Westerners," the famous novel, which will be seen in screen version at the Liberty Theatre Sunday, is not only famed as a great author, but as an explorer, big game hunter and sportsman as well. Indeed, it is difficult to say in just which of these lines he has scored the greatest success. In the eyes of the general public, of course, his novels and stories stand foremost. But Major White is better known in Africa as the man who holds the world's lion-shooting record, the man who mapped German East Africa for sporting purposes, and then turned over his data to the British Government at the outbreak of the war, and like performances.

From the far North—Alaska, Canada, all the lands of long, dark winter in the New continent—to the torrid jungles of Central Africa, White has hunted, prospected, surveyed and gathered the wonderfully accurate local color and atmosphere for his books.

He has loved the outdoors and lived there since his boyhood days on his father's timber land in Michigan. His first adventure trip was to the Black Hills during the gold rush there, which exciting epic of American history served as the foundation for "The Westerners." Many of the characters of "The Westerners," a Hodgkinson release, were taken from life, and the main events are actual history. In the Black Hills he found but a pill-bottle full of gold, which was stolen from him. He made his living shooting game for the mining camps. In this exciting occupation there were brushes with the Sioux, and also the beginning of his big game hunting career—for those were the days of the bison and the grizzly.

HORSE HAD A TEMPERAMENT

At Least Animal Seemed to Prove That It Had the Ability to Think for Itself.

Prima donnas and high-strung artists are temperamental, but it is not often that such a trait is found in a horse, as was the case in an incident which occurred on one of the uptown streets the other afternoon, says the New York Times. The horse was attached to a delivery wagon. Mr. Horse evidently thought that he had done enough work for the day, so without further ceremony he lay down across the tracks of one of the trolley lines.

A crowd soon collected, followed by the usual excitement with a storming motorman and a call for the police. A woman who said that she knew something about horses, said the animal was overcome by hard work, and she gave instructions to the driver as to what he should do. After a few minutes had passed a veterinary stepped out of the crowd and took a look at the horse. The veterinary turned to the cop and the others and said: "There is nothing the matter with this horse. He is tired and he just made up his mind to take a rest. You know when a horse gets tired, he is not particular as to where he stretches his bones. My word for it, he will be all right in a few minutes and be on his way."

The woman did not agree with him and insisted that something be done to alleviate the animal's suffering. She and the veterinary got into a heated argument, when the horse without further ado decided that the street was not the best place in the world to stretch his bones on, so he got up on all fours and shook himself. The driver hitched him to the wagon, and Mr. Horse started off on his labors as if nothing had happened. One man in the crowd said that he'd be darned if he ever knew until then that a horse could think.

ENTERTAINERS IN HARD LUCK

But to Put it Mildly, They Were Unfortunate in Their Selection of "Enlivening" Song.

While writing a book at Northampton, Mass., and a neighbor of Professor Whitney, Raphael Pumpelly tells in his reminiscences, Miss Alice Whitney told him the following at once humorous and pathetic story:

"They had as guests staying with them a missionary and his wife from the south seas. The woman was tall and of stern aspect; the man, her second husband, was a small and timid creature. One evening, in an attempt to introduce a little liveliness into the solemnity, Mrs. Whitney asked her sons, just home from college, and her daughter to sing some college songs. So gathering around the piano, with their backs to the audience, the young people began 'The King of the Cannibal Islands.' As the song progressed the missionary lady grew more and more erect and severe, and when it came to the serving up of roast missionary she rose in anger, and with her black silk skirts rustling she walked solemnly out of the room, followed timidly by her shrinking little husband.

"Then Mrs. Whitney burst out with: 'Oh, children, children, what have you done? Her first husband was eaten by cannibals!'"

Arabian Nights.

The Arabian tales, like the romances of chivalry, convey us into the fairy-realms, but the human personages which they introduce are very dissimilar.

These tales had their birth after the Arabs, yielding the empire of the sword to the Tartars, the Turks, and the Persians, had devoted themselves to commerce, literature, and the arts. We recognize in them the style of a mercantile people, as we do that of a warlike nation in the romances of chivalry. Riches and artificial luxuries dispute the palm with the splendid gifts of the fairies. The heroes unceasingly traverse distant realms, and the interests of merchandise excite their active curiosity, as much as the love of renown awakened the spirit of the ancient knights.—Anonymous.

Colors That Harmonize.

"You've got a blue dress on and a brown hair ribbon," remarked one girl to another as they were riding on a street car in the eastern district, says the Children's Museum News (Brooklyn). "You should not wear so many colors in your clothes."

"It's all right to wear different colors if they harmonize," was the rejoinder.

"What do you know about harmonizing?" continued the critic.

"Well, I've just come from the Children's museum," answered the defendant, "where I saw the birds and they aren't all the same color."

Confucius on Women.

Said Confucius: "Of all people, girls and servants are the most difficult to behave to. If you are familiar with them, they lose their humility. If you maintain reserve toward them, they are discontented." Chinese servants must have greatly improved since the Confucian period; at least modern times cannot parallel their excellence. As to Chinese girls, it is not safe to commit oneself concerning the girls of any nation, but they look discreet and slim and fair as flowers under their fringes of black hair, and gay as flowers, too, in their little pink and blue and violet coats buttoned straight up to their chins.—The New Republic.

CONCOCTION SHOULD HAVE "KICK" IN IT

PANAMA, Mar. 21. (By Mail).—The Panamanian drink called "papa" which is made of the milk of a young green cocoanut, enlivened with a generous dash of sherry, is finding much favor among people who come here from the states since national prohibition took effect. Owing in part, perhaps, to prohibition, the isthmus is experiencing the greatest rush of tourists in its history.

BOYHOOD PASTIME IS NOW HIS BUSINESS

When Robert Lambert was a mere boy working at the National Zoological Park at Washington, D. C., the then cheap Belgian hares were numerous and plentiful. He started raising them as pets, then as food for the reptiles and animals. Now it is his business. It is the "choice" diet of the "finiky" eaters and Lambert's unique business is indispensable. Chickens and pigeons are also part of his zoo meats.

ENGLISH ESTATES ON THE MARKET

LONDON, Mar. 23. (By Mail).—England's war taxes continue to force many of her nobility to sell parts of their great estates. One of the greatest of these which recently has passed under the auctioneer's hammer, is that of the Duke of Rutland, which is known as Belvoir. The duke owns about 59,000 acres of which he is selling about 13,000 acres located in the best part of the Lincolnshire hunting district. He explained at a public meeting that the sale was made
