QUEEN'S GIFT IS FOUND IN JUNGLE

LONDON, Mar. 28. (By Mail).—The massive chair made of copper, which natives believe was given by the late Queen Victoria of England to an Ashanti chieftain and used by him as his throne, has been discovered in the midst of a jungle far from human habitation in the Gold Coast Colony, West Africa. According to native legend it was placed over the grave of the chieftain who had occupied it when alive.

In their superstition they believe he still sits upon his old throne in spirit at certain times and, for this reason, they have never tried to move the chair which, they declare, has now rooted itself in the ground, says a dispatch to the Daily Graphic.

A Gold Coast surveyor first stumbled across this curiosity. A search party returned to the spot and found the jungle so dense that the natives had to hack a path with cutlasses through the undergrowth.

In spite of inquiry, no confirmation of the native story as to the history of the chair has been obtainable and how it came to be in the jungle remains a mystery.

Seventeen cents a head is the price paid and some expert shearers can clip one hundred animals a day, thus earning $17 in addition to board and lodging which is included with the job.

Our Window This Week

IN Colonial times watches were a good deal more ornamental than accurate. Some men carried two watches in order to be on time—and usually both were wrong. Watches were expensive luxuries for the rich.

Today Ingersoll factories turn out 20,000 dependable, good looking watches a day at prices that put watches within the reach of everyone.

See our window display showing the story.

AT THE THEATERS

E. K. Lincoln, actor, farmer, sportsman and breeder of blooded dogs, was absolutely happy in his role of Dick Gale in "Desert Gold," the Benjamin B. Hampton-Eltinge F. Warner photoplay from Zane Grey's popular novel coming to the Liberty Theatre on Sunday. The reason was because he wanted to play a Western part.

"I wanted an outdoor role where I could ride and fight," confessed the virile young actor. "The first pictures I ever made were pictures in which I did a lot of riding and little else. I couldn't ride very well in those days, but Chick Morrison, who does some riding in 'Desert Gold,' was a crack stunt rider and everything he did I tried. I didn't do them very well, but at least I didn't break my neck."

"And I like a good fight. After a lot of dress suit dramas, the role of Dick Gale, where I wore all the trappings of a cowboy, did some rough riding, pulled a gun and used my fists was a welcome relief."

A gold weighing machine in the Bank of England is so sensitive that a postage stamp dropped on the scale will turn the index on the dial a distance of six inches.
