THE F. F. DALLEY CORPORATION LTD. BUREAU, N. Y.

ALL POISONOUS OLIVES HAVE BEEN DESTROYED

WASHINGTON, D. C., Apr. 26.—A shipment of ripe olives rendered poisonous by bacteria which was seized in Milwaukee, Wis., on information furnished by the bureau of chemistry, United States department of agriculture, has been condemned and destroyed by order of the court, according to a statement issued today by officials of that bureau charged with the enforcement of the federal food and drugs act. The olives were in glass containers and labeled as "Supreme Curtis Quality California Ripe Olives packed by the Curtis Corporation, Long Beach, California."

"The government alleged in the libel that the olives were adulterated for the reason that they consisted in whole or in part of a filthy, decomposed, and putrid vegetable substance. Examination by the bureau of chemistry of sample from the shipment showed that guinea pigs fed from three of the bottles died, indicating the presence of toxin due to decomposition of the olives by bacteria which were later identified as bacillus botulinus. Olives similarly infected were responsible for the deaths of several people within recent months in Canton, Detroit, Brooklyn, Memphis, and elsewhere.

Defective Methods Responsible

Investigations by the bureau of chemistry have shown that defects in the methods of pickling, packing and processing ripe olives are responsible for widespread infection with bacteria. The practice of shipping and holding olives in weak brine for weeks and sometimes for months permits fermentation and generalized infection of the olives with many kinds of bacteria. Olives after this treatment are much more difficult to sterilize than those fresh from the tree and handled at once. As a result there is occasional failure on the part of the packer to heat the containers to a sufficiently high temperature to destroy all dangerous bacteria that may be on the olives.

The failure to sterilize properly is more likely to occur when glass containers are used, probably because of the fear that a higher temperature may break the glass. There is no good reason why ripe olives should not be completely sterilized when put up in glass as well as when put up in tin. As a matter of fact, however, ripe olives in glass have been the cause of the various cases of botulinus poisoning investigated by the bureau of chemistry. The only case in which a tin container appears to have been involved was that of a relish containing minced ripe olives where condiments rather than sterilization were depended upon for preservation. The poison would develop in tin containers if they were not sufficiently processed, but as there is no danger of breakage in tin, a sufficient degree of heat is usually applied.

In all cases of botulinus poisoning so far investigated the ripe olives were found to show signs of decomposition. They had an odor characteristic of spoilage and a taste that indicated they were not sound. In some instances where death resulted from botulinus it was established that the persons who served the olives and some who ate them recognized that the olives were spoiled. The development of the toxin produced by the bacillus botulinus is accompanied by decomposition, and while the investigation has not been complete enough to determine positively that sufficient spoilage to be detected certainly by smell and taste always is present when there is enough toxin to do harm, such has been the fact in all cases so far investigated. The department previously issued a warning to consumers to discard any food that shows indication of spoilage. While all food that shows signs of spoilage may not contain dangerous bacteria or toxins, any spoiled food may contain them and should not be eaten. If the food shows any definite signs of spoilage, however slight, it should be discarded. If there is any doubt about the food being sound, it should be cooked thoroughly before being served.

ARMY TENTS TO SHELTER N. Y. HOMELESS HORDE

NEW YORK, Apr. 26.—Thousands of New York families, some of the 73,114 registered as "homeless" by the Tenement House Department are expected to live in tents furnished by the United States army until the present house dearth is remedied, according to men interested in the building trade here. Just where they will locate their new domiciles has not yet been decided although an army of real estate agents "mobilized," as it were, overnight in Greater New York, has vast acreages of vacant land to lease in four of the five boroughs.

"From 1,500 to 2,000 families will live in tents in Pelham Bay Park alone," declared Walter C. Martin, superintendent of the Bronx Tenement House department, "and I have no doubt that many other sections will have whole colonies of tent dwellers after May. In view of the anticipated increased demand for tentage, especially by evicted families, I shall write to the war department for sufficient canvas to meet all possible need in the Bronx."

On top of the present house shortage looms the prospect of the usual horde of pleasure seekers, many of them with abundant war profits or earnings, who are coming to the metropolis for their summer outing. Some of these will offer landlords attractive prices for temporary quarters and, where tenants are occupying apartments from month to month and paying exorbitant rents the result is expected to be an increased number of evictions on May 1 and June 1.

Evasion of the anti-rent profiteering laws recently passed at Albany is a common charge in many cases against landlords up for trial in the municipal courts. Thousands of tenement "owners" to circumvent the law which compels the landlords to prove their rights to raise rents more than 25 per cent a year, have notified tenants to vacate their property by September 1. Then they plan to rent the apartments to highest bidders.

An indication of the competition for shelter in New York is afforded by the Tenement House department figures which show that, due to light building and the remodeling of one-time tenements into more profitable business structures, there are today actually fewer apartments in the city than there were this time a year ago.

Meantime the war is over and trainloads of oil, steel, lumber and automobile men and thousands of other prosperous Americans are said to be planning to invade the Great White Way. Trainloads already have arrived. For most of them it will be no short vacation: Many are bringing their families.

GRATEFUL FOR RELIEF FUND

Arthur R. Wilson, treasurer for the Klamath County Near East Relief committee, has received the following letter of appreciation from J. J. Handsaker of Portland, state director of relief campaign:

Please express to the people of Klamath county the grateful appreciation of our committee for your initial remittance of $2,150, for which I enclose official receipt. I am especially interested in the expression of your hope that you will reach at least $2500, and I am sure that if any county in the state has reason for generous contributions, it is Klamath.

Latest cables from your old neighbor and friend, W. E. Rambo, indicate that the Turks gave him and his two hundred orphans time to leave the city of Harounie before the bombardment took place and that they made the march of seventy miles to Adana in safety. Mr. Rambo wrote me some time ago telling me of what a wonderful lot of youngsters they had and that they were working day and night to meet the needs and wants of these two hundred children. He stated they range in ages from three to eighteen and many of them had been in deportations and when there were threats of trouble they were filled with panic, of course. Mrs. Rambo wrote her cousin here in Portland that they had been sleeping fully dressed and not knowing what time they might be called out. As long as two Klamath county people can make contributions to this relief like Mr. and Mrs. Rambo are making, I am not surprised that the rest of the county should want to back them up.

We are making the most vigorous representations to the government urging that measures be taken to prevent recurrences of such atrocities. However, while the atrocities do continue, it is a source of great satisfaction for us to know that not one of our five hundred relief workers has abandoned his post, and that such is the confidence of both the Turks and the French that our relief organizations are allowed to pass through the lines of both armies without molestation.

SELLING STOCK IN JACKSON CO. OIL CO.

Mrs. G. R. Satchwell, representing the Trigonia Oil company of Jackson county, Oregon, is here for the purpose of canvassing this territory for stock in this company. The company is now drilling on their property and has the hole down about 400 feet. She is stopping at the White Pelican hotel.

Landscape gardening is a fine art in Japan, and is carried out in miniature to perfection. Within the limits of a single dish or flower-pot there can be seen bridges, paths, mountains, stone-lanterns, all complete and perfect.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

WHEN MIXED WITH SULPHUR TO BRINGS BACK ITS BEAUTIFUL LUSTRE AT ONCE

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

SCORPION VICTOR OVER CENTIPEDE

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., Apr. 23.—The desert-old question as to which wins in a death-battle between a scorpion and a centipede has been answered for the first time, possibly, by J. W. Catlek, former mayor of San Bernardino, who witnessed such a contest in the Painted Hills of San Bernardino county.

The scorpion won.

Catlek was lifting a rock to obtain a mining monument when he discovered the two creatures of the desert preparing for battle. They paid no attention to him, but carefully began the "rendezvous with death." Apparently the poison of neither was fatal to the other and death came to the centipede only when the scorpion finally fastened its claws about its enemy and tore off its head while the centipede was struggling to free itself.

The two creatures were each about two inches long.

For decades prospectors on the Mohave desert and in Death valley have been willing to bet—sometimes small fortunes—on the question of whether a centipede or a scorpion would win a battle to the death. It is said, but as far as was known never witnessed such a contest.

The southwest quarter of the southeast quarter, the east half of the southwest quarter, and the northwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section twenty-six, in township thirty-nine south, range twelve east of Willamette Meridian, together with the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereto belonging or in any wise appertaining, together with all water rights appurtenant to said land or to become appurtenant thereto, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy a judgment rendered in the above entitled case on the 31st day of March, 1920, which said judgment is for the sum of four hundred dollars ($400.00), with interest upon the said sum from the 9th day of October, 1917, at the rate of six per cent per annum; and one hundred dollars ($100.00) attorneys' fees; and for the further sum of one hundred thirty-three and 50-100 dollars ($133.50), with interest on said sum from the 4th day of October, 1919, at the rate of six per cent per annum, and for the sum of sixty-one dollars ($61.00) costs, and the costs and expenses of this sale on execution.

Dated this 12th day of April, A. D. 1920.

Sheriff of Klamath County, Oregon.

Our Window This Week

IN Colonial times watches were a good deal more ornamental than accurate. Some men carried two watches in order to be on time—and usually both were wrong. Watches were expensive luxuries for the rich.

Today Ingersoll factories turn out 20,000 dependable, good looking watches a day at prices that put watches within the reach of everyone.

See our window display showing the story.
