

"SHURE, I LOVE THE DEAR SILVER THAT SHINES IN YOUR HAIR AND THE BROW THAT'S ALL FURROWED AND WRINKLED WITH CARE; I KISS THE DEAR FINGERS SO TOIL WORN FOR ME, OH! GOD BLESS YOU AND KEEP YOU, MOTHER MACHREE."

NEXT SUNDAY IS MOTHER'S DAY—THE DAY WHEN WE ARE ASKED TO REMEMBER THE DEAREST, SWEETEST TREASURE WE HAVE ON EARTH. HOW MANY OF US HAVE THOUGHT OF ITS APPROACH AND HOW MANY OF US ARE GOING TO FITTINGLY REMEMBER THE PERSON FOR WHOSE HONOR THIS DAY HAS BEEN SET APART? HOW MANY OF US HAVE REMEMBERED MOTHER DURING THE PAST YEAR? THE FORGETFULNESS HAS NOT BEEN WILFUL—JUST MERELY THOUGHTLESSNESS, BUT IT HAS BEEN THOUGHTLESSNESS THAT CAUSED MANY A HEARTACHE.

LET US TURN OVER A NEW LEAF.

PLACE WITH US AN ORDER FOR A DOZEN WHITE CARNATIONS FOR THAT DEAR LITTLE TREASURE THAT YOU LOVE SO DEARLY. WE WILL DELIVER THEM TO HER WITH A LITTLE NOTE FROM YOU TUCKED AWAY AMONG THEM AND BOTH WILL FILL HER HEART, AND YOURS, WITH A JOY AND PEACE NEVER BEFORE EXPERIENCED BY EITHER.

FACTS GIVE LIE TO REPORTS OF EXTRAVAGANCE

"That the University of Oregon, Oregon Agricultural college, and Monmouth normal, are not conducted economically," has been a statement made by various opponents of the higher educational tax measure provided as a relief to the distressed financial situation of the state's educational institutions.

Educational experts, including those of the bureau of education of the United States government, commonly compare the costs of education in the various states by two methods:

1. They make up a table of the investment in buildings per full-time resident student.
2. They make up a table of per capita cost per year.

In both these comparisons the Oregon Agricultural college and the University of Oregon are among the lowest. The average value of buildings for each full-time student in the state universities and agricultural colleges of the United States in 1918 was $995. At the Oregon Agricultural college, however, it was at that time only $526 and at the University of Oregon only $409, less than half of the national average.

The investment per student in buildings has been greatly lowered in both institutions by the increases in attendance, so that in 1920 the comparison shows that for the Oregon Agricultural college the average value of buildings per student is only $306 and at the University of Oregon only $222.

In per student cost per year, college and university also stand among the lowest. A United States bureau of education table, issued before the war, gave the average cost for a large number of typical institutions at $325. Even then the institutions of this state stood uncommonly low, while with the new increases in attendance, the comparison now would be:

Average for typical schools (before war)	$325
Average for University of Oregon (1920)	$292
Average for Oregon Agricultural college (1920)	$190

Even with the addition of the new millage, the agricultural college for example would still be $70 per student a year below the average per student at five of the best known agricultural colleges of equal grade, which may be taken as a fair comparison: Michigan, Iowa, Indiana, Kansas and Washington State college. The figures for these other five great schools were averaged, from a four-year period prior to the war when costs were far lower than now. The Oregon institution would with the new millage, not only be spending $70 a year less, but would be spending dollars depreciated more than one-half in buying power since the pre-war period.

It can hardly be supposed from the facts set forth above that the Oregon institutions are mismanaged. On the contrary they are very ably managed.

AT THE THEATERS

Just at the moment when happiness was his and he had stepped out of the western church with his bride on his arm, a volley of hidden rifles spurred, mingling the sound of shots with the music of the wedding bells, and Cheyenne Harry's father, mother, brothers and wife, sank on the church steps, victims of one of the cattle feuds that were a blot on the fair name of the Golden West. Then Cheyenne raised his right hand and swore to be revenged on the gang of hired murderers.

This is the situation on which the dramatic story of "Riders of Vengeance," a Harry Carey Western picture, is based. "Riders of Vengeance" will be shown at the Liberty Theatre tonight.

"Confession" involves a theme never before attempted. It will be long remembered both for its powerful story and the marvelous portrayal of the role enacted by Henry B. Walthall.

As the Catholic priest, Walthall's true artistry is displayed in this enthralling screen drama. The scenes of "Confession" present a succession of dramatic thunderbolts. Tense situations and gripping climaxes hold the viewers in suspense throughout, though the tremendous theme is softened by the elements of love and comedy which pervade the story.

Walthall in the role of Father Bartlett is placed in an unprecedented position. By the laws of the Church he is bound to secrecy when his revelation of knowledge gained in the confessional is the one thing that can save his own brother, who has been falsely accused of another's crime.

The denouement of his heart-breaking situation is accomplished by the author, Hal Reid, in clever dramatic fashion and with absolute fidelity to the great fundamental Catholic principle involved.

The story of Denman Thompson's "The Old Homestead" hardly needs repetition to any American. The peaceful country life which is broken up when the son leaves, and the old man's search for him which is rewarded on Christmas Eve, are as fresh as the palms from the Bible in many a home.

"The Old Homestead" has played to millions of people on stage and screen. Have you seen it? See it again! Did you miss it? See it now! It may be your last chance. At the Mondale tonight (Friday), with an all-star cast.

G. Stanslee of the Keeley Musical company of Seattle, will be at the Mondale Theatre all this week. You will miss a musical treat if you fail to hear Mr. Stanslee's playing.

His father, mother, brothers and bride were shot from ambush as they came out of the church after the wedding ceremony. He swore to be avenged for their deaths and went into the desert to plan.

After two years the members of Cheyenne Harry Carson's family were well nigh forgotten. Then there appeared a scrawled note nailed to a post in the centre of Mesquite. It contained the list of Cheyenne's enemies and his intention to kill them. He began at the head of the list. Gale Thurman, sheriff, was last.

Then came the girl, traveling to marry the sheriff. Fate put her in Cheyenne's grasp.

The absorbing, nerve-thrilling story of "Riders of Vengeance" will be told on the screens of the Liberty Theatre next Friday. You will be a heavy loser if you miss it. Harry Carey is the star.

THE USE OF these columns will make money for you.
