PLAGUES TO BE NEXT WAR WEAPON

LONDON, April 28. (By Mail.)—Mobilization of the mosquito, the housefly, the louse and various other disease-carrying pests for the dissemination of deadly germs in enemy territory is a possibility of "the next war" pictured by Professor Maxwell Lefroy, a scientist. "I foresee the mosquito from Brazil starting yellow fever in new lands, the horse-fly, duly infested with cholera, dysentery or enteric and the typhus-laden louse doing their deadly work much more effectively than spies poisoning wells," said Professor Lefroy in a recent address.

"This would be part of a War Office of entomologists—the working out of strategic plans for the distribution of these pests by airplane. It seems that the world is intent upon furnishing an airplane service for these pests, many of which are now held somewhat in check by natural enemies in their native climes.

MERRILL, PHOENIX LIKE, RISES AGAIN

MERRILL, May 20.—Phoenix like, Merrill promises to emerge from the ashes of its late destruction, plumed from a progressive commercial standpoint, more gorgeously than before.

The unselfish and public spirited attitude of her business men insures her future on the map. At the present writing a large three story structure for the corner of Front and Main streets is practically assured. Two-thirds of the money has been raised and the remaining third is an assured fact. The first floor or basement of this building will be devoted to laundry, bowling alley and pool room. The second floor will house four business houses: hardware store, ladies and gentlemen's furnishing store, grocery store and a restaurant. The upper floor will be finished for a thoroughly modern fifty-room hotel. This building will be of modern type—steel and tile.

The very popular young business man, Mr. Kirkpatrick, has opened up his purse to the tune of a theatre for Merrill with a seating capacity of 1000 persons.

The Square Deal Drug store has met the emergency with a thoroughly modern bungalow of eight rooms for her pharmacist, Mr. Murphy.

Mr. Hobbs promises to put up a large building to house his full stock of goods some time in the future and really this is the most economical place to build.

Who says Merrill is dead?

PERSONAL MENTION

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Stenwell left this morning for San Francisco, Long Beach, Los Angeles and several other California points for several weeks' visit in the hope of benefiting Mr. Stenwell's health. Mr. Stenwell has been quite ill for the past three weeks.

Mrs. Charles Otey left for the Chiloquin camp this afternoon for a couple of weeks' visit.

Mrs. T. J. Mortell and little daughter returned from a month's visit with friends and relatives in San Francisco last night. They were accompanied home by Mrs. Mortell's mother, Mrs. L. M. Glasco.

The attorneys in the court house case will leave in the morning for Roseburg to argue the question.

AT THE THEATERS

The court room was packed. So far the testimony had been merely a matter of form, and unless other witnesses were called, the prisoner, by his own statement of guilt, would be convicted of the murder of Crosby Dana.

Then Carlotta Austin entered and took the witness stand. Solemnly she swore to tell the truth—but there was absolutely no one who could prove that the words she uttered were lies—terrible falsehoods that robbed her of her virtue! Lies that branded her a scarlet woman!

But Carlotta was fighting for the life of the man she loved—her husband, and her own reputation, if she could prove by soiling it that her husband was justified in killing Dana, was as naught. So she lied! She had the right to lie, so she believed.

"The Right to Lie" is the Albert Capellani-Pathe feature starring Dolores Cassinelli and coming to the Liberty Theatre Thursday.

When "Sooner or Later," the current Owen Moore Selznick Picture comes to the Star Theatre tonight local fans will have their first opportunity of seeing one of the latest phases of movie progress—the art of camouflage, developed to such a high extent during the war and now adapted to motion picture studio use.

Joseph Teicher, the scenic artist at the Selznick studio is chiefly responsible for the development. Without disturbing the dramatic continuity of the production, it was necessary to take Owen Moore and his company to a wide stretch of country, with a lake and hills and winding paths, the whole flooded with moonlight.

This was done with the aid of all the tools of the camouflager—paint, board, frames of steel and wire, and the scientific use of perspective. The result was so baffling that photographs of it deceived all who had not seen the studio scenes. For the movie cameras the "coup de camouflage" went over with a bang.

"We've got to do something amazing—something that will make the whole town sit up and take notice." Such was the edict that went out from the new owner of the Morning Leader following a director's meeting.

John McHenry, the city editor, shook his head dubiously. "Not a chance—unless—" and then he had an inspiration. "unless we can get something new on the murder mystery—something the other papers didn't get." He went to the phone and called Alma Jordan, the star feminine reporter, known in the parlance of the newspaper as the "sob sister."

There had been a murder at the Odeon Theatre some time before. The star of the show, an idol of the hour, had been killed by a shot as he sat in his dressing room during the last ensemble of the chorus. Circumstances pointed the accusing finger at the actor's wife—for she had quarreled violently and often with her husband. But the evidence against her was only circumstantial and the grand jury refused to indict her.

But Alma Jordan had a hunch as to who fired the shot that killed the Odeon's leading actor. And therein was The Leader's only chance for a big scoop. So she and the city editor, with the help of the owner of the paper, set a trap for the person they felt was guilty of the murder. But the suspected one slipped out.

But Alma Jordan persisted and the murderer was brought to the law, but incidentally Alma's worthless brother was placed in a position that well nigh broke his faithful sister's heart.

That, briefly, is the story of "The Woman Under Cover," which brings Fritzi Brunette to the Liberty Theatre Friday, in the latest Universal photoplay, with George McDaniels, Fountain LeRue and Harry Springler in her supporting cast.

GRASSHOPPER DRIVE BY FARM BUREAU

On May 7th of last year, the first grasshoppers made their appearance and if we had been able to go after them right then, we would have saved considerable time as well as expense, but we had to wait on our orders for arsenic and molasses, etc., as we could not get enough in town. This year, the Klamath Farm Bureau through its Pest Fund, raised by a four per cent acre pledge, is able to handle the matter in a more efficient manner. The Bureau has already purchased and has on hand the materials necessary to start a campaign. By poisoning the grasshoppers as soon as they hatch and before they spread, considerable less territory will need to be poisoned.

The grasshopper poison has to be mixed fresh and put out at once. On account of this, it is impossible to mix and distribute from a central point as we did with the squirrel poison, but we can mix at one farm for an entire neighborhood, thus saving some time and trouble. Every one should be on the lookout for the first appearance of this pest and notify the County Agent's office immediately.

The women of London have 1,250 dressmaking establishments to cater to their needs.
