POT POURRI

By LONE STAR

Watson, the Los Angeles Blue-beard, now admits nine murders. Why doesn't he admit them all and be done with it?

The Literary Digest informs us that we need Religious Deflation. We thought we had heard about every brand of religion there is, but we confess that this is a new one.

Coming from The Literary Digest however, demands that we pay a measure of attention to it, so let's look into it for a few minutes and see if we can discover just what Religious Deflation is.

Last week The Lone Star was driving a rented Flyver to Merrill when suddenly he heard a noise like a pistol shot, and on investigating found that Elizabeth's left hind leg had gone out of commission. In other words the tire was flat. Now that is what we would call Deflation of Rubber. Rubber with all the wind out of it.

So we would naturally presume that Religious Deflation would be Religion with all the wind out of it, and if it is, bring it on immediately, as that sounds good to us.

There was not very much wind in the Religion that the Man of Galilee gave us over 2,000 years ago, and which if followed would do away with a whole lot of the strife and turmoil in the world today. There was nothing of the fanatical or impractical about that religion. Just a pure, simple loving doctrine, which had for its object the other fellow and not ones self all the time.

And the beauty of His doctrine was that it was so practical that He lived it Himself right here upon earth as a Man among men. A carpenter by trade, working among other carpenters, doing a hard day's work for a small day's pay He showed His fellow men and the world at large that it was possible to live a life pleasing to both Himself and His God.

True it is He finished up by dying a martyr's death, but take into consideration the gross savagery of the times in which He lived. Just imagine a mob who could take pleasure in driving nails through the hands and feet of a helpless individual while they had him strapped and roped.

Nothing could be too rotten or horrifying for a bacchanalian mob like that to do. But listen to me folks, that sort of a thing could not be pulled off these days. True it is that there is an element among us who are no more enlightened now than they were then, but that element is in the very small minority.

If the Man of Galilee were to come back again today and live the same life that he lived then, and preach the same doctrine that he preached then, THE WORLD WOULD WELCOME HIM WITH OPEN ARMS. Never forget that.

But that doctrine He preached has been sadly prostituted since that day.

Sect after sect has sprung up, ism after ism has sprung up until the poor groper after the truth is lost in a maze of creeds and doctrines and isms and rules and regulations, and doesn't know which way to turn.

Go to the Baptist and ask him what to do to be on the safe side, and he will tell you that you must conform yourself to the doctrines and rules laid down by his church and you will be all right.

Now go to the Methodist brother and ask him the same question and tell him what the Baptist brother told you, and he will tell you your information was wrong, and that you do not need to do any of those things to be on the safe side.

But here comes along a Presbyterian brother and he will tell you that the other two are both wrong. He has the only right way. And so that's the way it goes only multiplied about 500 times for there are about 500 different sects and creeds in the world, all claiming to be the right one.

No, folks, it won't go. It's a funny thing that the Man of Galilee never even wrote His creed down in black and white at all. Ever think of that? He lived it instead.

So we guess The Literary Digest is right. Let's let all the wind out of our present day religions, and get back to the religion of love and common sense that was given us so many years ago, and see if that won't work better.

The trouble with us today is that we are money-mad. There isn't a business man in Klamath Falls today who is not pretty close to the profiteering line. But what good does it all do? We can't take our wealth with us when we go. We might be able to buy a little higher priced car down here but we can't take that with us either, as gasoline is pretty inflammable. So what's the use.

Lone Star is no prophet but he predicts that sooner or later a spark will ignite the powder-keg of American civilization and it will go up in smoke. That is, unless someone takes a tumble to themselves.

But in passing, I wonder if you ever heard the story of the well-dressed young lady who hailed a four-wheeler to take her home in. Just as she was getting in she noticed the horse getting very restless and frisky. This rather alarmed the lady who was somewhat timid, and turning to the driver she said, "I hope you won't run away with me, sir." The cabby heaved a heavy sigh. "No, mum," he replied, "I've a wife and five kids at home already."

The tanning of ostrich skins is a growing industry in South Africa. The first paper mill in America was erected near Philadelphia in 1690.
