If the Wood Dealer Sold Service

We do not sell current; we sell service. That sounds odd doesn't it?

Well, suppose the wood dealer sold service instead of wood, he would tend to your furnace and your range, take away the ashes and clean the flues. You would buy so much heat.

Now you buy so much light, although you pay according to the current you consume. But the service is performed for you by this company at the substations and power plants.

That is what we want to give you—efficient service. It is the aim of this company to have none but satisfied customers. No matter what it is, if you have a grievance, or are dissatisfied about your bill or do not understand our rates, please come in and see us or write us about it.

If you have any suggestions to make, we will gladly avail ourselves of them as our aim is constantly to improve our service to you as fast as the development of science and human ability permit.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

YOU CAN BRING BACK COLOR AND LUSTRE WITH SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

FAMOUS CHICAGO CONVENTION OF '60 RECALLED

CHICAGO, May 22.—The convening of the Republicans in Chicago, June 6, to nominate a candidate for president recalls afresh at this time the Republican convention opening here 60 years ago which nominated Abraham Lincoln. This was the second national Republican convention and the first of the many which have since been held in Chicago.

The convention assembled on May 16, 1860, and Lincoln was nominated on May 19, the third and last day. After his election feeling aroused by the slavery issue ran quickly into civil war.

Relics of the campaign of 1860, including the oil painting of the "rail splitter," are preserved by the Chicago Historical society. E. E. Wood, field secretary of the society, has just prepared what he regards as the most complete account of the events of the convention of 60 years ago. In this he calls attention to Addison G. Proctor, of Ann Arbor, Mich., who, Mr. Wood believes, is the only surviving delegate of the convention.

Chicago in 1860 was a promising city of 110,000 not quite 25 years old. It had won the convention by the offer to build the largest assembly hall in the country and fill it at every session. Accordingly the "Wigwam" arose at the southwest corner of Lake and Market streets, occupying a space 100 by 180 feet. It was a temporary wooden structure costing a little over the estimated $5,000. The balance was made up by charging 25 cents admission on its formal opening the Saturday before the convention.

Few Republican conventions, if any, have been so charged with excitement or had so spectacular an ending. Lincoln's prospects appeared small enough before the convention opened. The favorite was William H. Seward, senator from New York. He had a great asset in the ability of Thurlow Weed, who prosecuted his campaign among the delegates. He suffered a handicap in the determined opposition of Horace Greeley, the famous New York editor, who had no candidate of his own but refused to have Seward. Both Greeley and Weed were early on the ground and according to Mr. Wood's review, the centers of interest. He notes, however, that other, and non-political attractions, were numerous, among them being Zouaves, circus band, minstrels, and such well-known theatrical pieces of the day as "Lucetta Borgia" and "The Hidden Hand."

The slavery issue came up quickly on the first day of the convention, when David Wilcox of Pennsylvania on taking the chair as temporary chairman made a 10-minute anti-slavery speech. "No extension of slavery" became an essential part of the platform next day.

In view of the many days now spent in hearing delegate contests, this convention of 60 years ago offered something novel. There were no contested delegates. There were, however, some "contesting" states. Whether to admit Maryland, Virginia, Kentucky and Texas was a question that occupied most of the first day and was still undecided when adjournment came for the day.

The next day the convention decided to admit the "border states." The platform committee then brought in its report. It was amended to include a reassertion of the "self evident truths" of the constitution. At adjournment little remained beyond choosing the candidate, and Mr. Wood characterizes that night as a tumultuous one filled with band music and processions until almost day. Enthusiasm for Seward, well worked up in his behalf, was at high tide. Greeley telegraphed his paper that Seward's nomination appeared certain. Incidentally, remarks Mr. Wood, this convention was the first at which the telegraph was employed.

How Lincoln came into the nomination is now for many a familiar story. Seward led on the first ballot 173 1/2 with Lincoln next best at 102, and 233 necessary for choice. A few more votes came to Seward on the second ballot, bringing his total to 184 1/2, while Lincoln jumped to close quarters with 181. The taking of the third ballot showing Lincoln going strongly to the front.

As the figures were being compiled, D. K. Cartter of Cleveland, O., counting them up for himself, found that Lincoln needed only a few votes to win. The tabulation in fact at that moment was 231 1/2 for Lincoln and 180 for Seward, with 233 necessary for the nomination. Instantly Cartter was on his feet to announce the transfer of four Ohio votes from Chase to Lincoln.

The convention quickly broke into a scene of enthusiasm with few parallels in the long list of American political conventions. Further votes were changed to bring Lincoln's total to 354. The nomination was then made unanimous.

PROTEST EXPENSIVE MEALS FOR JUDGES

COLUMBUS, O., May 22.—Expense accounts of public officials have come under discussion in Ohio with the refusal of the state auditor to pass an expense account turned in by several judges. When the auditor held that $5.40 was too much for even a judge to pay for a day's meals out of the state's money, one of the jurists wrote vigorously in protest.

Judge Willis Vickery and Judge T. S. Dunlap, both of the appellate court at Cleveland, and state auditor A. V. Donahey are the officials concerned.

Replying to Donahey's ruling, Judge Vickery requested that he be told on what authority the state auditor supervised his expense accounts. Donahey answered: "Judge, when a man eats $5.40 worth in one day to keep body and soul together, as auditor of the state I do not consult the law, as guardian of the taxpayers' money, I consult my conscience."

Judge Vickery wrote that he intended to live at a first class hotel "and I propose," he added, "to have the money necessary therefor, and if the state won't pay it, I'll either go without the money or know the reason why the state won't pay it." Donahey replied: "You'll go without the money all right, Judge, unless the supreme court orders me to pay it."

The state auditor held that regardless of the high cost of living $5 is sufficient to cover both lodging and meals for any public official.

In England is it again becoming the fashion for society people to go into business. Lord Carnarvon, a Scotch earl of ancient pedigree, is a commercial traveler. A son of the Duke of Montrose has poined a shipbuilding firm in Glasgow, while a son of the Marquis of Ailsa runs an automobile repair shop in London.
