

BOY SCOUTS TO CELEBRATE 10TH ANNIVERSARY

Next week, beginning Memorial Day and ending June 5, is Boy Scout Week throughout America and Boy Scouts everywhere will actively endeavor to promote the strength of the organization.

Local Scouts will take part in Memorial Day exercises here and during the week following will make a canvass for associate members—adults beyond the scout age but who should be interested in scoutcraft because of the good it is doing for the boyhood of America.

An associate membership in the Boy Scouts may be had for a fee of from one to five dollars a year. There are also contributing memberships which pay from $5 to $25 a year, and sustaining memberships of from $25 upwards.

Local scouts now have a complete troop of 32 members, who have all passed the first scout test, and there are enough boys interested to form another troop in the near future. Robert S. Fry is the local scoutmaster, with the Rev. S. J. Chaney and L. W. Hartley as assistants.

Business men, as the results of scout discipline are becoming apparent, are awakening to vigorous interest in the organization, which is only six months old in Klamath Falls.

Nationally the Boy Scouts are ten years old and the activities next week will be in the nature of a tenth birthday celebration affecting all of the 17,000 communities where scout troops are in operation.

Sunday, May 30th, the opening day of Boy Scout Week, special services in which Scouts will participate are planned for churches of all denominations. Programs of various Scouting activities will be held through the week, and Friday, June 4th, will be observed as Hike and Camp Day, with everyone of the 17,000 local scout troops getting into the woods.

Saturday, the 5th, will be Field Day, with competitions in tent pitching, fire building, wall scaling, signaling, tower and bridge building and demonstrations, of first aid and life saving.

During the celebration of Boy Scout Week, all those who became associate members of the National Council, Boy Scouts of America, during Boy Scout Week in June, 1919, will be given an opportunity through the local chairman or direct by mail, to again express their interest in the boyhood of the nation by renewing their membership, and an effort will also be made to secure many new associate members.

The President added that the peace resolution omitted many important objects for the vindication of which the United States entered the war.

QUARANTINE FOR SPREADERS OF SOCIAL PLAGUE

Quarantine placards are being printed for use in the campaign which Dr. J. M. Murphy, acting assistant surgeon of the United States Health Service, with the co-operation of the local health board and city administration, has started against the spread of venereal disease in this community.

Wherever reasonable suspicion exists that persons are infected and so conducting themselves as to spread the infection, examination will be made and if the disease is determined to exist the individual will be quarantined.

Larger centers have provided isolation hospitals to care for these carriers and cure them. As no isolation hospital exists here the diseased persons will be quarantined in their own places of abode until they are cured.

Dr. Murphy has notified Dr. David N. Roeberg of the condition existing here and is co-operating with Dr. A. A. Soule, city health officer, in the campaign to reduce the danger. When he leaves at the end of the week the city health officer will still continue the work in an effort to reduce the spread of infection to a minimum.

Dr. Roeberg is keenly interested in local health conditions in this regard and is looking for local health and law enforcement officers to aid in supervising the situation.

Seven women, notoriously and openly following the occupation that spreads venereal disease, were examined by the health officers Monday and reports from a blood test that is being made are expected in a day or two. Dr. Murphy states that it is a proved fact that practically all women of this class are affected with one or the other of the two diseases common to their mode of living and are a menace to the health of any community where they ply their trade.

"It is certain," he said, "that the majority of citizens do not want this condition to exist, and will stand firmly back of any systematized effort to stamp them out."

While the primary function of the public health service is protection of the public health, it is not blinded to the moral issue involved. Although willing to hold aloof as long as the city and state authorities are doing their duty the health service is in a position to operate through its law enforcement branch in closing all existing places of prostitution discovered in the course of its health investigations if the state and local authorities neglect enforcement of the law or are unable to enforce it.

Because of the evil and misery that they come in contact with every day, arising from the continuation of this traffic, the officers of the public health service are probably more awake to the terrible consequences of immorality than any other class of citizens and are leading the campaign of education to awaken others to the continued disastrous consequences of the general infraction of the moral and legal codes.

WEATHER REPORT

OREGON—Tonight and Friday, fair; southwesterly winds.

CHINESE ORATOR HANDLES JAPAN WITHOUT GLOVES

By far the largest attendance of the season was crowded into the big Chautauqua tent last night to see and hear Dr. Ng Poon Chew, the eminent Chinese statesman and orator. Dr. Chew has been aptly called "the Chinese Mark Twain." His humor was delightful and good wholesome fun permeates his lecture. His absolute open and fearless denunciation of Japan, whom he characterized as the Prussia of Asia, and her methods won for him the admiration of his hearers.

In the opening part of his address Dr. Chew dealt with China's growth as a nation during the past eight years of republican government. He told of his country's friendship for America, the great influence for advancement that American missionary work had been and of the thousands of young Chinese men and women who had returned to their native land with American university training and were doing much to shake off the oriental lethargy that had overpowered his country.

His English vocabulary never failed him and the talk was interspersed with vivid humor, but he dealt with generalities until the closing 15 minutes of his lecture.

Then he got down to the question of Japan's present policy as an international menace and during the final 15 minutes he spoke not as the paid lecturer but as a Chinese patriot and he gave to his audience in rapid succession inside information regarding the political situation in the Far East that could not fail to bring home to every American present the potential dangers of Japanese domination in Asia.

He ripped aside the curtains of diplomacy and in straightforward fighting language showed the American people within sound of his voice the pit that had been dug for themselves and their posterity when the iniquitous Shantung grab was condoned by their representatives at Versailles and when he was finished the skeleton of Japanese intrigue swung bare, repulsive to every American idea and ideal of liberty and equal justice.

He went back to the beginning of Japan's adoption of a policy of domination by force in 1884. In that year, he said, Japan sent a mission abroad to study the constitutions and governmental policies of foreign nations as a model for her own national policy. The mission visited the United States but the doctrine of freedom and equality for all citizens did not appeal to them. They could not grasp the unwritten constitution of England, and France had the same democratic drawback as the United States.

In Germany, with the Bismarck "blood and iron" rule in its highest ascendant, they found what they wished. Bismarck welcomed them, they stayed and studied for two or three years, and when they returned to Japan they carried the seed of German "kultur" with them. Transplanted on Japanese stock the same policy that spread ruin over Europe for four years under Hohenzollern guidance, now threatens to engulf the Orient in blood.

Confined to her own island empire, said Dr. Chew, Japan is harmless. A dozen battleships could throw a blockade across the important ports and Japan would be forced to yield within a few weeks. But she has grabbed Manchuria and Korea and is now colonizing Shantung. With this territory to support her armies she develops more strength and should she spread her control over the entire Chinese republic she would be invincible. There, said the speaker, is the danger of further Japanese domination in the Far East. It has already spread too far.

When Germany controlled Shantung there were but a few hundred Japanese in the province. Since Japan acquired Shantung 150,000 Japanese have been settled in the
