Men Crave Music

But they have always wanted to help produce it. There is nothing quite so satisfying to a man as playing the Gulbransen Player-Piano—for instance take its Pedal Touch which controls so many degrees of Tone Shading produced through those little "air muscle fingers" inside the instrument.

This Pedal Touch gives you that same confidence of successful performance that one gets from driving a powerful car that answers to your every desire.

Gulbransens sell as low as $15 per month and are Nationally Priced Everywhere and no freight added.

COLLEGES MAY IGNORE EXAMS.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., July 7.—The faculties of Harvard university and Massachusetts Institute of technology have taken action to dispel or to ally the undergraduate body of final examinations.

The tests which the students of the institute underwent in June may be the last of the kind at "Tech." A committee of faculty members, alumni and undergraduates have been appointed to investigate methods of testing the college man's knowledge and proficiency in studies other than by the customary examination. This step followed unsuccessful attempts to have the students accept the honor system.

At Harvard there has been no consideration of the proposal to do away with examinations but there has been action to ease the mental strain which they put on the students. The soothing charms attributed to music, and its power to stimulate sluggish minds to active thought, have been called upon as first aid to undergraduates beset with troublesome tests.

Under the direction of Professor A. T. Davison, university choirmaster, musical recitals of 10 minutes each have been given daily in Appleton chapel during the examination season. They have been held in the morning, just before the first of the days' examinations was to begin. The programs consisted of light classical selections, and proved popular alike among men who had sat up all night with their books and hollow-eyed and nervous, sought rest and calm; and among others who, after a night of sleep, sought from the music a mental stimulus for the tests which lay ahead.

KING PLANS PARTY FOR V. C. WEARERS

LONDON, June 13. (By Mail).—King George has decided to entertain the holders of the Victoria cross, Britain's highest war honor, at a garden party at Buckingham palace. The date is not yet fixed.

Each recipient will probably be invited to take one or more members of his family with him. The guests will include all those surviving to whom Victoria crosses were awarded in previous years.

At present there are about 117 surviving who received the cross before the last war and since August, 1914, 580 further awards have been made. Only about half of those are now living, so it is expected that the attendance at the coming event will be approximately 400.

WILL START HAYING

Latta Bros., ranchers on the Merrill road, have just purchased two Johnson mowers from the Howie garage to harvest their big hay crop, on which they expect to begin working at once.

WHAT KLAMATH HOPES FROM GOV'T

pendent upon the Horse Fly reservoir and Clear lake.

Modoc sub-project—Total acreage as estimated in an old report, 22,000 acres. A large portion is public land, the available water supply being Clear lake.

Sand Hollow—An organized district, the major portion public land dependent for water supply from Upper Klamath lake under present plans. Irrigation of this land is feasible from Clear lake in connection with the Modoc project.

Langell Valley and Horse Fly districts—Total area 30,000 acres, 8,000 acres public land. Available water supply Clear lake, which will only afford irrigation for a part of the total area. In order to bring all of the lands of this district under irrigation it will be necessary to construct the Horse Fly reservoir. Under present conditions it would be difficult, if not impossible for the district to raise money to construct this reservoir. It would appear that inasmuch as the reservoir will be the controlling factor in the further reclamation of additional land in Tule lake which may amount to from 35,000 to 50,000 acres, all of which will be public and lying within the state of California, lands which are of proven productiveness and well able to bear any reasonable charge for reclamation. Taking all of these factors into consideration it would appear that the construction of Horse Fly dam should be undertaken by the United States. Upon the borders of the Upper Klamath lake which is a government controlled reservoir, the entire water rights being acquired by purchase from private holders and by cession of state titles to the United States—all of the waters of which is or will be necessary for the ultimate development of the Klamath project—are 10,000 acres of public land in the reclamation reserve.

About 1,000 acres of this land has been included in a private system of dikes. There has been no announced plans for the remaining acreage acceptable to the public. In the interests of public economy these lands should be made available for entry and settlement as surrounding lands are being rapidly reclaimed by private enterprise.

In submitting this statement of conditions governing these several extensions of the Klamath Project, it is kept in mind that the projects are meritorious and that Klamath county and the states of Oregon and California are entitled to consideration and federal assistance in placing these lands in condition for settlement and the production of crops.

From the standpoint of economy there are probably few, if any, reclamation projects that will show return for the investment as quickly as the Klamath project with as small an outlay of government appropriation per acre. The Klamath project affords a most feasible and practical means for the fulfillment in part of the promise of the government of the United States to provide lands for settlement by former service men and women. An appropriation made for the completion of the Klamath project would be an example of true conservation and reconstruction. The entire reclamation of the lands of the Klamath project is a task that may well be considered impossible by private enterprise from several standpoints, only one of which will be considered at this time—that is lack of assets in private control which would justify a bond issue sufficiently large to finance the necessary works for the reclamation of the land under discussion.

Eighty-seven per cent of the total area of Klamath county is unavailable for taxation by local or state government. The major part of this percentage is under the control of the interior department of the United States. A large portion is in forest reserves and it would be but simple equity on the part of the United States to allot funds sufficient to complete the Klamath project from the moneys received from the sale of timber in these reserves.

It was the girl's first appearance as a singer in the crowded cafe and she had made a hit. So much so that the manager wanted her to cash in on it by going down and sitting at the tables with the patrons. Timidly the girl looked over her audience, in front of the stage a fine looking young man gazed back at her and as their eyes met, slowly shook his head. The girl refused to leave the stage.

That was the beginning of the heroine's undoing in "The Mothers of Men," which comes to the Liberty Theatre tonight, with Claire Whitney, a beautiful and talented young actress in the leading role. In after years, long after the man had betrayed her, he again entered her life at a trying moment. How she foiled an attempt to make her betray secrets that would have ruined those she loved, and killed her betrayer who was seeking her life, is the big moment in the play.

May Allison, the captivating Metro star, in "The Cheater," is announced as the feature attraction at the Liberty Theatre Thursday. The new photoplay is described as one of the sensations of the year, presenting Miss Allison in an intensely dramatic role.

"The Cheater" is a screen version of "Judah," the notable stage play by Henry Arthur Jones.

The story of "The Cheater" deals with faith healing and when it was produced in England it created a storm of discussion. The controversy resembled that now raging here over spiritualism and kindred topics.

Miss Allison's role is that of Lily Meany, who, under the name of Vashti Dethic, has won a reputation for effecting cures by faith. She knows she is a cheater and when she faces the prospect of trying to cure the crippled sister of Judah, Lord Asgarby, she experiences a change of heart due to Judah's nobility and the simple faith of his little sister.
