

It's Easier to Spend Than to SAVE

TOO many people take the lines of least resistance and arrive at old age in a state of partial or total dependence. It is so much easier to squander than to scruple and sacrifice.

How's YOUR case? Is the future caring for itself, or are you preparing for it by building up a fat Savings Account here at the First National?

Fish that inhabit deep water and lie near the bottom are not only more tenacious of life than those which inhabit the surface of the water, but their flesh keeps longer.

The first camp meeting in the United States was conducted by James McGeary and the two brothers McGee around a little log church on Gasper river in Logan county, Kentucky, near the beginning of the nineteenth century.

TREASURE OF PIRATE GOLD

Remarkable Collection That is Displayed in Museum of the University of Pennsylvania.

The largest collection of the gold work of the Aztecs, the Incas and other ancient Central American gold workers, whose civilization was destroyed by the buccaneers seeking the metal, is on permanent display at the museum of the University of Pennsylvania. The collection contains $5,000,000 worth of pirate gold, some of which has never been melted down because of its exquisite workmanship.

Part of the ancient collection had been buried in the mountains of Colombia by the Indians to save the treasure from invaders. This part was purchased by the museum of the University of Pennsylvania just after it had been brought to New York by its discoverers. The other part is composed of heirlooms handed down to a French family descended from some branch of early Spanish royalty, who got the pieces from shipments sent home, perhaps by Cortez and his followers. The latter part was picked up in Paris recently by Dr. George Byron Gorton, director of the university museum.

The Colombian part of the collection contains nearly 100 pieces, from breast-plates to bells, bracelets, girdles, earrings and even golden staples, and a helmet of pure gold. The Paris collection of 84 pieces contains two pure gold idols nine inches high and three inches wide at the shoulders. The Incas collection also contains a death mask of thin, beaten gold.

PURPOSE IN SELF-TORTURE

People of Northern New Mexico Have High Object in Infliction of Bodily Punishment.

A passion play takes place yearly in the Raton and Sandia mountains of northern New Mexico. A group of people living in this district have for centuries each Lenten season gone through a series of self-inflicted bodily tortures, enduring their agonies in the belief that these barbarities will absolve them from past and future sins. The passion play is said to be so savagely realistic that at times performers have died as a result of injuries received while taking part in it.

These people are known as Los Hermanos Penitentes, or the Penitent brotherhood. The Penitentes are of Mexican origin, with a marked strain of Indian blood. They are densely ignorant, not many being able to read Spanish, and only a very few are familiar with English. Hardly one in ten has ever been a hundred miles away from the isolated mountain settlements where they make their homes. They keep small flocks of cattle and sheep and sometimes mine for gold and silver. They live in mud and crude stone houses, as did their ancestors two and three hundred years ago.

Door Mats Grown in America.

Growing of door mats has been carried out for some time in certain parts of America, the only articles required being some pieces of old sacking, or any similar material, and common grass seed, says Detroit News. The sacking is cut to the desired size and shape and then moistened with water and placed on level soil. Grass seed is then sowed rather thickly over the surface of the sacking, the whole covered with paper so as to shade it from the strong sun and keep it protected for about a week, at the end of which time the seed will have germinated. The cover is then removed. Every three or four days the mat is moved to a fresh position to prevent the roots fastening themselves to the soil beneath. After a week or ten days, when the mat has dried and the grass turned a nice shade of green, the mat is ready for use. The little grass plants hold on to the canvas most tenaciously, even when they are dead, this being due to the fact that the root hairs become entangled in the rough hairs of the sacking and are extremely difficult to remove.

Nature's Natural Processes.

We are living on a globe we call solid, but in fact it is plastic and changeable, with a gaseous ocean above us and a liquid one below it. From these three factors all organic life is created, and upon them it depends for its existence. Vegetable life derives its life and body from certain chemical combinations, induced by the action of the sun's radiations. Animal life depends on vegetable life, and also serves other animals as food. All these return to mother earth and thus pay the debt they borrowed. From this we learn that what is death and destruction of one is life of another. Wherefore what we call waste and destruction is only a necessary and unavoidable process of the living functions of mother earth.—Exchange.

Remarkable Transformation.

John had been with his father on the occasion of his maiden effort with a car. Waiting for friends, in another car, before starting on a pleasure trip, an inadvertent turn too far to the side of the road had resulted in being nicely caught in about a foot of fine sticky mud. The friends arriving had made merry over the task of pushing out the car. John, later in the day, excitedly describing the affair, had this, among other things, to say: "And then they turned all the ladies into men, and they all helped to just push the car right out of the sticky mud."

FOREST PATROL ORGANIZATION

(The Forest Patrol) Planes arrived in Oregon for regular duty on June 23. Already the forest service, state and associations are taking up marking of lookout and other points so that observers may be able frequently to check up on their locations and so more accurately locate fires. Maps which the forest service, district 6, has been compiling all winter divide western Oregon into 62 quadrangles, and lookout points will be numbered on the ground as follows: A white triangle 15 feet on a side, apex of triangle pointing to north in which will be in black letters, toward apex of triangle, number of station; toward base, number of quadrangle. This will indicate at once to the observer the quadrangle he is in and will permit of expansion in number of lookouts as needs require without confusing numbering. It is also planned to mark as many ranger stations, camps and other points as possible with numbers or letters to enable the pilots the more easily to locate themselves. Towns will be asked to have the name of the town indicated so it can easily be distinguished from the air.

There will be two routes daily out of Eugene, one north to Portland and one south to Medford. Two routes from Medford to California points will also be in operation.

Radio sets will be installed at Eugene, Medford, Portland and probably also on Bald mountain, in Polk county. It is predicted that air patrol will soon be extended to Washington also.

The state board of forestry (Oregon) and federal forest service are providing funds to defray expenses which the air service can not meet. One accomplishment of the "air patrol committee" was securing of the federal appropriation of $50,000 to enable the forest service to co-operate with the air service. The forest service has a liaison officer at each base and landing field to work with the air service and transmit reports to proper forest service and protection agency officials.
