AT THE THEATERS

A strikingly graphic reproduction of a Chinese Tong room, with the Oriental highlanders plotting to kill one of their number who has failed to respond to blackmail, is shown in "The Tong Man," Sessue Hayakawa's latest production for Robertson-Cole release.

It is authentically stated that this Tong room is not a studio built set but a real bona-fide Tong room, which was brought to the studio intact from the headquarters of one of the largest Tongs on the Pacific Coast. In this setting is shown the Tong shrine, the dragon's head (in which Hayakawa and his sweetheart take refuge from the treacherous head Tong man) and the hangings and Joss used in the actual Tong meetings.

Another realistic set is the Chinese gambling den and hop joint, showing the Chinks in the pursuit of their favorite indoor sports.

At the Mondale Theatre Wednesday and Thursday.

VERDICT FOR PLAINTIFF

The jury in the justice court in the case of W. A. Graham against Caroline, Dave and Dan Liskey, last night returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $100. Defendants must pay costs.

EXPLANATION OF GASOLINE SHORTAGE

the average production for a well is 29.64 barrels a day as against 40.96 a day five years ago.

Curtailment of sales was brought about, according to the statement, "by the pressing demand of public duty," as there was not enough gasoline "to meet requirements of industry and agriculture and all the desires of the motorist."

"Reports of a dangerous situation came down from the farms. There was insufficient gasoline distributed to keep tractors and irrigation pumps going. There was only one course—to conserve by curtailing the least essential consumption. What constitutes the least essential was clear joriding."

Rumors that the shortage is due to exports and to capping of wells in order to decrease supply and raise prices are declared unfounded. The company exports of gasoline, it says, were 705,741 barrels in 1918, while this year the total will be 213,351 under old contracts.

The company quotes a report of the State Oil and Gas Supervisor saying that statements filed in December, 1919, by all oil producers in the state showed there were 8,928 wells in operation, as against 8,188 at the end of 1918. Up to June 19 this year, notices of intention to drill 425 new wells had been filed, as against 291 at the same date in the preceding year. The supervisor concluded by saying that "in all fields there is evidence of effort to obtain maximum production."

and in a hurry to get back to business, or when otherwise pressed for time, and when little daily problems have made you feel a wee bit out of sorts, what a relief it is to sit down to a lunch or dinner where everything around you radiates promptness, brightness, cleanliness, and culinary efficiency! Makes the world seem brighter, doesn't it?

That's what you will find in this cafe, and, really, it's always a part of our menu. Our well prepared meals seem to "hit the spot" with greater precision and gratification just because we insist upon maintaining surroundings and service just like this.

Perhaps You DO Save
—But HOW MUCH

SOMETIMES a fellow thinks he is really saving when he adds just what is convenient to his bank balance on payday.

That, however, is only make-believe saving. The person who actually sacrifices to make his account at the First National Bank grow is the one who is going to succeed.

FEEL NEED OF GRUMBLING

Complaints Absolutely a Source of Enjoyment to Great Mass of Human Beings.

One is as likely to grumble against the people one injures as against the people who injure one. One has to grumble at something or other. A man who can find nothing to complain about simply does not know how to enjoy himself, the New Statesman (London) observes.

Now wouldn't your life be exceedingly flat?

With nothing whatever to grumble at? That is why people like to read letters in the paper, and also helps to explain the huge circulation of one of the notorious weekly papers. The editor was clever enough to see that most people dearly love their grievances, and that if you give them a platform for their grievances you will sell more copies than if you give them only a platform for your own ideals.

We do not mean to say that the mass of human beings are devoid of ideals, but we fear that on ordinary occasions they are a great deal more interested in their complaints. It is just the same with regard to their health. They are much less likely to boast how well they are feeling than how ill they are feeling. A liver complaint means far more to a man than the best digestion. If you allow him he will describe his symptoms—the taste in his mouth, the sudden loss of vision, and what happens if he eats stewed plums. And he tells you all this not in humility but with the vanity of a peacock.

The vanity of an invalid far surpasses any vanity known in healthy men and women. This is, perhaps, one of the compensations of ill health. It gives one something to complain about.

FORESAW CONQUEST OF AIR

But Brother-in-Law of Oliver Cromwell Had Some Ideas That Appear Crude Today.

John Wilkins, who married Robina, sister of Oliver Cromwell, in 1656, had original ideas on flying. He set forth his theories in a book in which he discussed four possible varieties of aviation: By spirits or angels, by the help of fowls, by wings fastened immediately to the body, and by a flying chariot.

Wilkins wrote that the fourth way seemed to him "much more useful than the rest; and that is by a flying chariot, which may be so contrived as to carry a man within it; and though the strength of a spring might perhaps be serviceable for the motion of this engine, yet it were better to have it assisted by the labor of some intelligent mover. And, therefore, if it were made big enough to carry sundry persons together, then each of them in their several turn might successfully labor in the causing of this motion."

Wilkins was one of the founders of the Royal society. He believed it should be "easy to frame an instrument wherein anyone may sit and give such motion unto it as shall convey him aloft through the air."

turned last evening from the south for his semi-monthly consideration of the local affairs of his company. During his absence he was in the Imperial valley and crossed the line into Mexico.

Dr. Massey, who has been spending a ten days' vacation with his family at Newport, Oregon, is expected to return home tonight. His family will remain in Newport for some time.
