COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

DARKENS BEAUTIFULLY AND RESTORES ITS NATURAL COLOR AND LUSTRE AT ONCE

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur. An easier way is to get the phur recipe at home, though, is trouble-free preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of fuss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it is done so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes dark, glossy, soft, and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

BUCHAREST, June 20. (By Mail)

Rumania, with the addition of the provinces of Bessarabia, Bukovina, Transylvania, the Banat and Dobrudja is now a country of at least 10 distinct nationalities. In its parliament are seen peasants with white kirtle and embroidered vests and leggings reminding of the red Indian, sitting together with red fozzed Turks.

"It is especially in the Dobrudja that these different nationalities jostle together," said Queen Marie of Rumania. Together with Rumanians, live peacefully side by side Bulgarians, Turks, Tartars, Russians, and in places even Germans.

"I have been to a village in the Dobrudja which was part Rumanian, part Russian, part German and part Turkish. I went from one side to another, visiting many a cottage, entering each church, ending my round in the tiny mosque hung with faded carpets, and there in a crowd of lowly Turks I listened to their curious service, of which I understood naught. A woman who is not veiled has no right to enter the holy precinct; but a royal name opens many a door, and many a severe rule is broken in the joy of receiving so unusual a guest.

"On a burning summer's day I came to a tiny town almost entirely inhabited by Turks. I was distributing money among the poor and forsaken, and had been moving from place to place. Now it was the turn of the Mussulman population, therefore, I visited the most wretched quarters, my hands filled with many a coin.

"Such was their joy at my coming that the real object of my visit was almost forgotten. I found myself surrounded by a swarm of excited women in strange attire, prattling a language I could not understand.

"They called me Sultana, and each one wanted to touch me; they fingered my clothes, patted me on the back, one old hag even chucked me under the chin. They drew me with them from hut to hut, from court to court. I found myself separated from my companions, wandering in a world I had never known. In a labyrinth of tiny mud-built huts, of ridiculously small gardens, of hidden little courts, they dragged me with them, making me enter their hovels, put my hands on their children and sit down.

The poorer Mussulman woman are not really veiled. They wear wide cotton trousers, and over these a sort of mantle which they hold together under the nose. The shape of these mantles gives them that indescribable line, so agreeable to the eye, and which alone belongs to the East. Also the colors they choose are always harmonious; they are toned down to their surroundings by sun and dust. They wear strange dull blues and mauves—even their blacks are not really black, but have taken rusty tints that mingle pleasingly with mud-coloured environment in which they dwell.

"When attired for longer excursions, their garb is generally black, with a snow-white cloth on their heads wrapped in such manner that it conceals the entire face, except the eyes. Indescribably picturesque and mysterious are these dusky figures, generally carrying a heavy staff in their hands; there is something biblical about them, something that takes one back to faraway times."

To Europeans in India the wild bee is more dangerous than the snake.

In Greece a girl's dowry consists of household furniture and linen rather than money.

TRIBESMEN CLASH

OSAKA, Japan, June 15. (By Mail.)—Koreans, employed in construction of an electric line between Osaka and Kobe, recently clashed with villagers of Tachibarna. Both the Koreans and the villagers, it was reported, numbered several thousand, and were armed with bamboo spears and sickles. Five Koreans were wounded seriously before police stopped the fight. The cause of the clash was not reported.

CANADIAN CHILDREN

WAR ON RODENTS

REGINA, Sask., July 23.—Destruction by school children of approximately 2,000,000 gophers last spring saved about 1,000,000 bushels of grain, officials have estimated. To encourage destruction of the animals, the provincial government offered prizes of Shetland ponies, sheep and pure bred pigs to the children with the largest "kill." Elmer Oliver of Colgate won first prize with 11,171 dead gophers to his credit.
