BLAMES AUTOIST FOR COLLISION

Charles Plumb was running his car without lights or license when he collided with her milk delivery wagon on Eleventh street Wednesday night, declared Mrs. Gladys Poole in a statement to the Herald today. Mrs. Poole said that the version of the accident as given by Plumb minimized his responsibility for the accident.

She says that she was on the proper side of the street, that the wagon was close up against the curb, in fact the horse was standing partly on the sidewalk. Plumb was on the wrong side, she says, and there was no gravel pile within two blocks of the spot. When he struck the wagon on her little girl had just mounted a step on the rear axle to enter the vehicle and was thrown to the sidewalk. She was not seriously hurt, but bruised and some of the shoulder and neck muscles were wrenched and strained. The place of accident was close to a street light and Mrs. Poole says there was a "red-headed girl" with Plumb. This woman, she says, rose in the seat after the wagon was struck and looked back but the car did not stop. The horse ran away and was caught after a chase of two or three blocks. The rig was badly smashed and milk bottles broken.

Mr. Victor, near whose house the accident took place, immediately got in his car and gave chase to Plumb. He reported to Mrs. Poole that he followed the car to a place on the Shippington road, where it drove into an alley and its occupants ran.

WANTED—1000 MEN IN KLAMATH TO JOIN CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

If you want to improve the living conditions in Klamath county join the chamber of commerce. If you want to help develop the great resources join the chamber of commerce. If you want to make this a good place for your boy or girl to grow up in join the chamber of commerce. The best men belong. The best men are working to help do these things. Roll up your sleeves and get in and boost. Read these reasons why you should not join.

1—I don't like the way they are running things. Then get in and help change them. The affairs of the chamber are in the hands of 15 business men. They are men who would add to any business in the town if they were associated with it. Have you ever stopped to talk with them about the welfare of the town? Have you ever made a suggestion on how to help develop the country? Then how can you criticize and refuse to help?

2—I haven't time to attend the meetings. That should not prevent your giving them your support financially. If other men are willing to give both time and money then you can surely give money. But we want your time and advice as well. You can't afford to miss these meetings. One man who attended a meeting yesterday said it was the best time he had in a long time. He is a busy man too. The busiest men in Klamath county were at the meeting yesterday. They volunteered to give two hours a week to a special piece of work.

3—My firm is a member already. So is ours. But firms are impersonal and can give only financial support. Time energy and personal interest are equally important. Because the firm in which you are interested in no way relieves you from doing your share. If others did likewise the work would be limited to a small number of firms and it would soon become a cold business proposition and unresponsive to the appeal of civic betterment.

4—You have enough without me. No excuse could be more selfish. Because other men are willing to pull the load uphill is no reason why you should catch on behind and ride. You will share in the results obtained by the Klamath county chamber of commerce. You cannot avoid it if you live in Klamath county. Why not carry your end. The more members the chamber has the greater things it can do. There is no "enough" in this work. The problems and the duties are unlimited.

Mrs. Poole says she got the police and went with them to the abandoned car. The engine was still warm and she found her daughter's cap on the running board, making her positive that it was the same car that struck her wagon.

Plumb will have a hearing this afternoon before Justice Chapman. O. J. Underwood, who owned the car, which he had asked Plumb to drive from the repair shop up town, said yesterday that he would compensate Mrs. Poole for the damage to her outfit.

AT THE THEATERS

Poor and unlettered, but known as the "best blacksmith in the country," Ash Whipple aspired to the heart of Nancy Haws, the fairest flower in the village. He was not alone in his admiration, but his suit was crowned with success and they were married within the shadow of Little Thunder, the stately peak which both had grown to look upon as an altar to their happiness.

A contemptible rake, smarting under the sting of a well deserved thrashing at the hands of the smithy, planned to shatter his home and his happiness, and when an outcast whom Ash had befriended struck and accidentally killed the ruffian, Ash helped him to escape and assumed responsibility for the murder. Here began a struggle between love for his wife and child and duty to a fellowman who had shielded them from the sting of bitter slander, giving rise to a succession of situations of dramatic intensity.

How the various threads of this mountain romance are finally drawn together is told in "His Divorced Wife."

"His Divorced Wife" is an adaptation of the magazine story known as "An Altar on Little Thunder." It will be shown at the Liberty Theatre tonight only.

WOMEN STUDENTS WANT LATCHKEYS

EDINBURGH, Scotland, July 29. (By Mail.)—Young women students of the University of Edinburgh have revolted against what they regard as "childish" restriction in the use of latchkeys after the regulation hour for closing the hall in which they live.

Thirty-three students of Masson hall, one of the numerous hotels in which women students reside, have gone on record as refusing to obey instructions regarding the use of night keys. The girls assert that they are being treated as children rather than as young women well able to take care of themselves.

The protest resulted in a petition to the University requesting a change in the warden of the hall. The view of the management is that too much liberty was given the girls under the previous regime and that unless they alter their petition, the girls must leave the hall at the end of the session.

The Pall Mall Gazette of London in commenting on the incident says: "With the merits of the particular case we are not concerned but there is a principle involved which sooner or later will have to be decided. When women won their right to compete with men in the professions they practically won all the rights that appertain to the acquirement and practice of those professions. Those who imagine that young women will submit to the exercise of authority which would not be tolerated by their brothers, make a great mistake, a mistake which, if it is persisted in, will do an immense
