HALO DUE TO MISCONCEPTION

Explanation of Luminous Circle About the Heads of Saints is Somewhat Numerous.

For centuries it has been an almost universal practice among artists to paint halos above the heads of the saints in their pictures. Some characters have been so depicted, even though not officially canonized or previous to that ceremony, when the artist wished to indicate special spiritual qualities or holiness, as, for instance, in the case of Joan of Arc.
During the eleventh and twelfth centuries there was a great activity in the building of churches and cathedrals, and it was a common practice to erect around the outside of the buildings statues of the saints, which were placed just under the eaves. As the images became discolored by the rain which fell upon the roofs and then poured over them, the authorities, as a means of protection, placed over the heads of the figures wooden disks of a size sufficient to protect them. Giotto, the great artist, began to paint holy pictures when only a country boy, and in his ignorance assumed that the disks were essential parts of the images of the saints. Hence his earliest paintings represent each sacred figure wearing over the head something that looks like the bottom of a tub. Later on he identified this into a mere circle, dark at first, but growing more luminous with each production until finally he developed the circle of light that has come down unchanged through generations of painters as the badge of sanctity.—New York Post.

DREW LAUGHTER FROM GRANT

Witty Remarks of Mark Twain Broke Down Reserve Characteristic of the Famous Soldier.

Responding to the toast of "Babies" at the memorable Chicago banquet in honor of Gen. Grant in 1870, Mark Twain concluded with a sentence that drew the gathering in an uproar. In his inimitable drawing voice he said: "In his cradle, somewhere under the flag, the future illustrious commander-in-chief of the American armies is so little burdened with his approaching grandeur and responsibilities as to be giving his whole strategic mind, at this moment, to trying to find some way to get his own big toe into his mouth, an achievement which (meaning no disrespect) the illustrious guest of this evening also turned his attention to some fifty-six years ago. And if the child is but the father of the man, there are mighty few who will doubt that he succeeded."
At that conclusion the audience broke into cheers and roars of laughter in which even the reserved Grant joined.

Have Broad Matrimonial Views.

Present-day Maoris are nominally Christians, but there are many old chiefs who are still fond of their ancient totem poles. Their religion is that of nature-worship combined with the veneration of ancestors. A peculiar and interesting detail of their religion is the belief that the soul dwells in each human being's left eye.
The Maoris were enthusiastic cannibals in by-gone days, their favorite dish being roasted hearts. Eating the hearts of their enemies was supposed to give them strength, especially in the pursuit of war-time activities.
As for the Maoris' marriage laws, they seem to have none. But they believe very strongly that man should have absolute power over woman. Even today they have very broad views on the subject of matrimony, and each man generally takes unto himself as many wives as he can afford to maintain.

Joke 5,000 Years Old.

Planned by the ancient Egyptians over 5,000 years ago, a joke just came to fruition, writes Prof. Flinders Petrie, the noted archeologist. "While we were trying to find a way into a queen's pyramid," he says, "we discovered on a rock face a door which was so beautifully and exactly fitted that it was difficult to see the joints. We immediately set to work on this, thinking that we had found at last an entrance to the inner chamber. After a considerable amount of work we removed the door and found—solid rock! It was a carefully arranged blind to balk anyone who wanted to find the entrance into the royal tomb, and had been made about 5,000 B. C. by someone with a sense of humor."

Humidity in Surgery.

Investigations made in several Boston hospitals by Dr. Ellsworth Huntington seem to indicate that for surgical operations, the heat condition of the atmosphere is high humidity, 80 per cent or more, directly after operations, and moderate humidity, about 60 per cent, at a temperature of 64 degrees Fahrenheit, a few days later. Doctor Huntington points out that, if these results are accepted, there is no reason why the optimum conditions of temperature and humidity should not be produced artificially in hospitals, causing a probable improvement in not less than 20 per cent in the results of operations.

TREASURES OF BUDDHIST ART

Marvelous Collection Preserved for Centuries in the Temple of Daigoji in Japan.

Daigoji, the best temple of the Ono school of the Shingon sect of Buddhism in Japan, situated not far from Kyoto, in the Uji district, suggests by its name its relation to Emperor Daigo, who reigned from 898 to 930. Its name originated from the fact that its founder, Abbot Shoho, came to this village and exclaimed after he drank from an old farmer's spring: "The water was as good as daigo!" It is a Buddhist word meaning an unctuous rich liquor. The posthumous title of the emperor must have originated from his devotion to the temple and its founder, as well as from his burial in the temple grounds.
Rare specimens of Buddhist art and literature, carefully preserved as the temple treasures of Daigoji, and exhibited recently at Tokio, through the efforts of Dr. Katsumi Korotia of the editorial staff of historiographical materials in Tokio Imperial university, bring the story of the temple down to 300 years ago. Among the peculiar paintings in the temple are the "flower viewing screens," pictures of horse training and a collection of fan paintings said to be rare treasures.
In the literary collection there is an illustrated copy of the third roll of "Scripture of Cause and Effect of the Past and the Present." It was made nearly 1,200 years ago, but the colors in the picture are as fresh as the present day pigments. This scroll is considered the oldest thing extant in Japan of colored art on paper.

TREES GIVE MILKLIKE JUICE

Tropics Provide Pretty Fair Substitute for the Animal Product in Use in Northern Climates.

In British Guiana and the West Indies, particularly on the banks of the River Demerara, there grows a tree known to the natives as the byahya, which yields from its bark and pith a juice slightly richer and thicker than cow's milk. The tree is about forty feet high and eighteen inches in circumference when full grown, and the natives use its juice as we use milk, it being perfectly harmless and mixing well with water.
The Gingsales have a tree—they call it kiragahuma—which yields a fluid in all respects like milk; while in the forests of Para grows a tree called the massendondron, which gives a milklike juice. It can be kept for an indefinite time and shows no tendency to become sour.
On the other hand, certain trees in the valleys of Aragua and in Canagua yield a similar fluid, which, when exposed to the air, begins to form into a kind of cheese, which very soon becomes sour.
In the Canary Islands there is a tree called tabaya dulce, of which the milk, thickened into a jelly, is considered a delicacy.

Unpleasant Dreams.

A London chemist, dreaming that he had swallowed poison by mistake, rose from the chair in which he had fallen asleep and, so vivid had the dream been, he went to the shop and took an antidote. But this, in the absence of real poison, began to poison him, and before he realized the mistake the error was beyond repair.
In another case a man, after a heated argument with a visiting friend, dreamed that his guest was in his room molesting him. He actually "felt" rough hands on his body, jumped out of bed, and ran to his friend's room. There he attacked his innocent "assailant" so violently that the latter was confined to bed for several weeks.

Bachelor to the Rescue.

In a street car the other day I sat directly behind a woman who was trying desperately to untie a face veil. I was fascinated by her persistent but fruitless attempts to untie the veil with one hand while with the other she clutched her nose glasses, which were helplessly entangled in it. I was just wondering why some woman passenger did not offer assistance, when she turned to me and said: "Pardon me, but would you be kind enough to see if you can unfasten this veil." After frantic efforts, amid the suppressed merriment of the passengers I came out victor. But I was a much embarrassed bachelor.—Exchange.

Ostrich Plumes.

Ostrich plumes are not actually plucked, by the way. They are cut-pruned with no damage or pain to the bird. When the feathers are "ripe" the ostriches are driven into a V-shaped enclosure. Their heads are covered with a hood like a stocking, which renders them tractable. The wings are spread by the man doing the "plucking" and the feathers are clipped off fairly close to the flesh. This does not hurt the bird in the least and within sixty days the dead quill ends drop out of their own accord. The tail feathers are also clipped.

Kept Fish Alive.

During the recent storm several automobiles got into such deep water at Pennsylvania and Twenty-second streets that they had to stop until the flood abated. One member of a fishing party climbed out on the running board of his car and carefully tied a net of live fish to a spoke and calmly dropped it into the water.—Indianapolis News.

THE cut above shows Peppermint field, plants put out early this spring; this field will produce at least 40 pounds of oil from each acre this year, figured at $8.60 per pound, the present market price, we have $344.00 gross production from one acre.

One well known chewing gum company will purchase 120,000 pounds each year, the total output from 3,000 acres.

The Klamath Mint Company is going to plant 1600 acres, located on the Caledonia marsh, eight miles from this city, which land has lately been purchased and is now being put in shape for planting.

The Klamath Mint Company is organized under the laws of the State of Oregon, and has been authorized to offer for sale $50,000 of its stock to investors in Klamath County, in shares of $100 each.

THREE BEARS SLAIN

KALISPELL, Mont., Aug. 14.—A party of eastern business men has returned from a hunting trip in the south fork of the Flathead river, during which they encountered much big game. In the party were W. H. Danforth of St. Louis; his son, Donald; L. B. Stuart of St. Louis and William R. Compton of New York.
With an inexperienced guide they succeeded in getting three bears, two brown and one cinnamon. They trapped a huge silvertip, but he got away.

MANY "DRUNKS"

BUTTE, Mont., Aug. 14.—Figures in the police court show that there were more convictions for drunkenness in that tribunal during July than in any month since Montana went dry, 20 months ago. Just 112 men and women were convicted of inebriety during that period.

POPE SLIPS AND FALLS

ROME, Aug. 14.—Pope Benedict met with a slight accident yesterday, when he slipped and fell on the marble floor while going to his private library. He received a slight abrasion of the shin near the knee.

Miss Edna Kemp, the first of several Winnipeg school teachers who are to exchange positions with teachers in Australasia, has departed for Auckland, New Zealand.
