AT THE THEATERS

You like screen comedy that is different; comedy that is always "in character," that springs from the actors in the story and their characters. It's the kind of comedy that is chock-full of chuckles, smiles, laughs and bursts of honest merriment. That's what you will find in Goldwyn's new Will Rogers' comedy, "Cupid, the Cowpuncher," adapted from Eleanor Gates' truthful, whimsically humorous comedy of cowboy life called "Alec Lloyd, Cowpuncher," which comes to the Star theatre tonight.

You know Will Rogers. His lariat-throwing exhibitions, accompanied by quaint comedy sayings, have made his name a household word throughout the country. He has proved just as accomplished on the screen. His humor is clean, clear-cut, natural and always human—just the quality that appeals to every member of the family.

Will Rogers in "Cupid, the Cowpuncher," is a tale of merriment blown in on a Western whirlwind of laughter. Here you have a star whose face is a laugh, and author whose first, last and middle name is beguiling humor, and a comedy that is clean, diverting and satisfying.

SAYS PEAT LANDS ARE IN DANGER

SALEM, Ore., Sept. 2.—Following an order received in Klamath Falls Saturday, ordering suspension of work on the new storage dam on upper Klamath lake, Percy Cupper, state engineer, received a letter from A. J. Bolton of San Francisco, to the effect that the peat lands located in what is known as the lower Klamath marsh are in immediate danger of being burned and the entire area converted into a desert waste.

Mr. Bolton attributed this alleged unsatisfactory condition to the closing of the Klamath straits through which the flow of Klamath river in time of high water found its way into the lower Klamath marsh.
