AT THE THEATERS

"Dandy belt, isn't it?" said Louis Benson as he picked up his holster belt. "And look at the gun I bought today. Isn't she a beauty?"

Out of the brandished holster he brought a wicked-looking shiny black affair with a long barrel which he wiggled at the press agent. The scene was the Brownwood Film Company's studio where they were making the picture, "Randy Burke of the U-Bar-U," which will be seen at the Liberty Theatre tonight.

"Ray, Mr. Benson," he was asked, "did you ever kill a man?"

"Nope," answered the actor, regretfully, "but I saw a lynching once. I was just a little time there. There was a family of four Mexican shepherders who lived near our ranch. They began to steal horses, and the men just naturally decided to clean out the whole lot of them."

"I heard rumors that the lynching was going to be pulled off, but because I was so young, they said they wouldn't let me go along. However, the night of the affair I sneaked around and trailed along behind. By the time we got to the house where the shepherders lived—a man and his sons, they were—I began to wish I'd stayed at home, but I didn't dare move."

"One of the fellows stepped up to the door and knocked. The father answered it and the boys said, 'You and your sons better come out, we want you.' They struggled, but it wasn't any use. One of the Mexicans was only about 14 years old, but they hanged him with the rest. It wasn't very pretty, but western justice is stern."

When Stanley Olmsted sat down before his typewriter and wrote "My Husband's Other Wife," he created a fascinating story with a complicated situation. When J. Stuart Blackton took the scenario and transferred it in action to the silver screen, he gave the story the master touch of pathos and humor, while Sylvia Brainer, Robert Gordon, Warren Chandler and May McAvoy, portraying the four principal characters, made the story live.

"My Husband's Other Wife" takes you behind the scenes in a theatre and shows you the private life of a popular stage star who submerges her husband's personality in that of her own. After the divorce, she realizes too late her husband's worth and tries to win him back, in spite of the fact that her husband has another wife.

"My Husband's Other Wife," which comes to the Liberty Theatre Thursday, untangles this interesting knot.

SURE THAT ANIMALS DREAM

Eminent Authorities Have Gone on Record, Though It Has Been Subject of Dispute.

Aristotle's history of animals declares that horses, oxen, goats, dogs and all viviparous quadrupeds dream. Pliny, in his natural history specifies the same animals. Buffon describes the dreams of animals. Macnish calls attention to the fact that horses neigh and rear in their sleep, and affirms that cows and sheep, especially at the period of rearing their young, dream.

Darwin, in the "Descent of Man," says that "dogs, cats, horses and probably all the higher animals, even birds, as is stated on good authority, have vivid dreams, and this is shown by their movements and voice."

George John Romanes, in his "Mental Evolution in Animals," says that the fact that dogs dream is proverbial, and quotes Seneca and Lucretius, and furnishes proof from Dr. Lauder Lindsay, an eminent authority, that horses dream. Bechstein holds that the bullfinch dreams, and gives a case where the dream took on the character of a nightmare, and the bird fell from its perch, and four great authorities say that dreaming becomes so vivid as to lead to somnambulism.

Quier gives a case of somnambulist watch dog which prowled in search of imaginary strangers or fowls, and exhibited toward them a whole series of pantomimic actions, including barking. Dryden says: "The little birds in dreams the songs repeat."

SHREWD IDEA IN POLITICS

Pictures of Presidential Candidates on Letter Heads Was a Popular Thing in 1890.

Back in the early days of the republic it was considered a fine idea to decorate paper with the portraits of presidential candidates. In this way the letter writer showed not only his preference, but tried to influence his correspondents for his candidate, remarks the New York Sun. A fine example of this sort of political propaganda was unearthed recently in New York. It dates back to 1890, when William Henry Harrison was running for president on the Whig ticket against Martin Van Buren, Democrat.

The letterhead shows the two sides of the gold medal awarded by congress to General Harrison for his services in the War of 1812. The picture to the left shows a medallion portrait of General Harrison, while the one at the right depicts the Goddess of Liberty, armed with a spear, placing a wreath of laurel on an Indian's head. This latter was founded as a compliment to the general for his success in fighting against the British and Indians.

Under the pictures of the two sides of the medal is a copy of the resolution of congress conferring the medals on General Harrison and Isaac Shelby, "late governor of Kentucky."

Improved Gun Has Kick.

The Bureau government forbids the natives to have guns in their possession, and prohibits trading in arrows and ammunition. But the native's ingenuity enables him to get around this. He will find a piece of gnarled wood, with a hole in it, and a crude primer and hammer, and will use safety matches in lieu of powder. He cuts off the heads of about two boxes of matches and puts them into the improvised barrel. He then runs his shot home and is ready for business.

And let me tell you, if you never tried to shoot with such a gun, don't ever do so. Why, an express rifle is about as kickless as a 22 caliber Flincher compared with this improvised shotgun! I tried shooting one once upon a time and the thing almost kicked my shoulder off.—National Geographic Bulletin.

Getting Rid of a Knot.

It is often a difficult business to get rid of knots, especially if these are of long standing. By following the plan indicated it is a simple matter to free the hardest knots, whether these be in straps, harness, rope, cord or anything of a similar nature. As a first step place the knot on some hard surface and give it a good hammering on all sides with a mallet or a thick piece of wood. Now boil up a little water with soap in it sufficient to make rather a cloudy solution. Then soak the knot for two or three minutes in the liquid. At the end of this time it will be found that it can be quite easily untied, often enough with the fingers. The loosening can be done with some sharp implement.

Profitable Companionship.

Among the most curious and interesting of natural phenomena are those pertaining to the mutual relationships of common organisms. Two plants, two animals, or a plant and an animal, may live together for their mutual benefit. Very often one of the partners gets food for the combination, while the other receives protection. This is the arrangement that subsists between tropical plants and certain species of ants which live and feed in their hollow stems, and in return drive away other insects that would do damage.

Real Success.

"Uncle George, what is success in life?" asked the small boy.

"Uncle George—it's getting' 'er folk to think as highly of you as you think of yourself.—London Blitz.

Important Notice To Everyone!

In response to numerous inquiries, and answering several unmerited criticisms, the CENTRAL LABOR COUNCIL makes the following statement:

The dance held in Klamath Falls on the night of Labor Day, Monday, September 6th, was not in any way sponsored by or given the approval of, the LABOR COUNCIL.

Early on Monday morning, at a meeting of representative citizens, it was decided, out of respect to the dead, to hold no dance. The LABOR COUNCIL went even further; an offer was made to abandon the entire program planned for the day. But, after going into the matter thoroughly, the dance was cancelled, and the musicians of the Wood Band left, with their Union, on the return special train, at 8 p. m., Monday.

It should be clearly understood that the LABOR COUNCIL has no interest in private promotions or exploitations. Even had the Houston fire never occurred, and the official dance program been carried out by this council, no charge would have been made for anything.

To avoid answering repeated communications, therefore, the CENTRAL LABOR COUNCIL states that it had no part in the affair given on Monday night by private individuals for personal profit.

Signed: W. S. CONKLING, President.

Attest: W. F. KAY, Secretary.

THE NEW YORK TIMES

BRYAN ASSAILS COX AND H. S. CUMMINGS

Cox Choice of Democratic Convention Chairman a "Tragedy" for the Party.

COX CANDIDACY A DISGRACE

His Nomination Would Be an Insult by the Liqueur Forces.

Special to The New York Times.

LINCOLN, Neb., May 12.—William Jennings Bryan turned his political batteries tonight on Governor Cox, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and Governor Cox of Ohio. In a statement given out here he said: "The selection of Chairman Cox is a disgrace to the party. It is a tragedy. It is a melancholy beginning if the Democrats have any intention of making a campaign this year. If the Democratic Party is to be a party of the people, it must be a party of the people."

Street ended and buried at sea. Cummings is just the person to officiate, but his selection is a serious handicap if the party proposes to appeal to the progressive sentiment of the country.

Mr. Bryan assails the Cox candidacy a disgrace. He says:

"The fact that the Democrats of two dry States, Ohio and Kentucky, have instructed for Governor Cox makes it proper to consider his position on the liquor question. It is becoming every day more and more apparent that he is the man about whose standard the voters will gather."

Governor Edwards is a job. A drunkard in the last stages of delirium tremens would have shown enough to know that Edwards has no chance of nomination. Senator Mitchell did not have any chance even before the Nebraska primary, hence he had nothing to lose. Governor Cox is their man and he has fairly won the dishonor that he seeks."

"After disgracing his state he appears to a position in which he could disgrace a nation. For years the men engaged in the liquor business have been the real aristocrats of the country, far more dangerous than the professional anarchists. Governor Cox has become their candidate."

"His nomination would make the Democratic Party the leader of the lawless element of the country and his selection, if such a thing were possible, would turn the White House over to those who hate the Government and the law is contempt."

"There is no likelihood of his nomination and no chance of his election if nominated, but who should any Democrat be willing to support a man whose nomination would insult the conscience of the nation? For the triumph of prohibition is a triumph of the people's conscience."
