PEPPERMINT GROWER RETURNS TO KLAMATH

John N. Davies, manager of the Klamath Mint company, came in on the train last night from a business trip to Eugene, Portland and Salem, transacting business for the company. He reports that much interest is being shown in the newly formed Klamath Mint company, and that several mint growers from the valley contemplate visiting Klamath county, for the purpose of looking over the project. They seemed much surprised to know that mint harvesting is now under way here, as they were under the impression that Klamath county was much later than the valley in all kinds of crop production. Manager Davies promised them all the surprise of their lives when they come and look over this section.

UNREST IS EVERYWHERE

ROME, Sept. 9.—The spirit of unrest has penetrated since the war even to such old world and out of the way spots as the Island of Sardinia. Among these picturesque peasants, many of whom cannot read or write, though they are often people of dignified manners and strong character, public opinion is diffused by word of mouth and a strong party has arisen lately whose motto is "Sardinia alone," who think that the island, which is the second largest in the Mediterranean would be more prosperous if it governed itself and had little or nothing to do with Italy.

In ancient days Sardinia was one of the great granaries of the world, supplying first Carthage and later Rome with immense quantities of grain. Now a large portion of the island is uncultivated and about one-fifth is covered with forests, chiefly consisting of holm, oak and cork trees. The most valuable exports however, are from the mines of lead, zinc, antimony, copper, silver, lignite and anthracite, which if only thoroughly developed, would be a source of great riches.

The Sardinians are a splendid fighting race and not only during the late world-conflict but throughout the Napoleonic wars and the Middle Ages provided some of the staunchest soldiers in Europe. The Sardinians have always considered their island the Cinderella of United Italy. They say that they have been alternately neglected and taken advantage of by the central government, education has been disregarded, the malarious state of the country has been ignored, few roads or railways have been provided in order to develop its resources, while government money has never been forthcoming for its needs.

The peasants of Sardinia declare that this is the moment when Sardinia might start on the road to regeneration and reconstruction, moral, commercial and economic but if it is, as of old, abandoned to apathy and want of initiative, ruin is certain. A deep spirit of discontent and irritation is prevalent. The Sardinians call themselves "the Irish of the Mediterranean" and a large party is being formed of those who desire to work out their own salvation and at least for a certain time to be entirely independent of the mother country, which they accuse of having treated them more like the typical stepmother. They ask to be allowed to take their destiny in their own hands.

AT THE THEATERS

She endured his jealousy and distrust for the sake of their child. But his suspicions were uncontrollable. Then one day—the final insult—and she left him.

Not forever—but vowing to return and win his love again! How she met him years later, unrecognized, and won her way again into his heart—well, we won't tell you more, but it makes one of the most powerful emotional dramas ever staged.

Dorothy Dalton is starred. The role of the wife and mother is perhaps the biggest she has ever played.

And it's a Thomas H. Ince production. A Paramount Artcraft picture. It is an adaptation of George Barr McCutcheon's story "Black is White." Charles Giblyn directed it. A picture that will move you, make you weep, laugh, and send you from the theatre in a happier mood. Showing at the Star Theatre tonight.
