

SCORE SLAIN N. Y. BOMB PLOT

ing was also damaged. Workmen this afternoon were endeavoring to repair the stock exchange. In cleaning up debris detectives found in the street close to the sidewalk in front of the entrance to the new sub-treasury a hole about 10 inches deep and three in diameter. The theory was advanced that the hole might have marked the exact location where the explosion occurred. The entrance to the sub-treasury as was the lobby into which the door opens was wrecked. Great columns of granite which ornament the sub-treasury building, and between which stands the statue of George Washington, were scarred and dented by pieces of flying debris or metal.

J. S. Morgan is in Europe, but at the time of the blast Thomas W. Lamont and other directors were in consultation in the Morgan building.

Police Commissioner Enright said after conferring with members of the Morgan firm he had that he had learned Elliott C. Bacon and Julius Spencer Morgan, members of the firm, were slightly injured. Enright quoted members of the firm as stating the blast assuredly came from the street and not from within the building.

The explosion came at a time when the canyons of lower New York were thronged with workers hastening to the lunchrooms. The roar was heard far up Manhattan island and hundreds of persons were hurled to the pavements.

Assistant District Attorney Talley, after visiting the scene, announced his belief that the explosion could not have been due to accident. His staff will question all witnesses. He said one thing that led him to credit a conspiracy theory was the time of the explosion, which was fixed by the clock in the sub-treasury building which stopped at 12:01. Working on the conspiracy theory the police picked up all remnants of the wrecked automobile and wagon.

Cries arose from the debris. Wall street was paved with glass and there gushed forth streams of blood more fit for a battlefield than for America's financial center.

One man was seen to sit up, brush his hand over his eyes and topple over dead into the gutter. Near him were found the bodies of three women and further on more bodies, lying side by side with the carcasses of horses.

Hardly had the roar of the explosion ended then a rush for the financial district was made from all parts of the city.

AT THE THEATERS

Ruth Budd, who plays the featured role in "A Scream in the Night," which Select Pictures presents at the Star theater tonight, can legitimately dispute the claim of others to the title of the world's perfect woman, in the opinion of scores of critics, both here and abroad, who have seen this new and unique screen personality during her vaudeville tours.

As one reviewer wrote: "We used to think that Annette Kellerman had that 'wonderful form' business corralled, but after seeing Miss Budd we're ready to sing, 'Then Along Came Ruth.'"

That Miss Budd can today call herself the perfect woman is the result of systematic exercise. As a child she was frail and slight. To build up her strength her father put her through a course of calisthenics, later setting up rings and horizontal bars for more strenuous work.

Miss Budd is perhaps the only actress who is able to portray the role of Darwa in "A Scream in the Night." In her interpretation of Darwa, Miss Budd is seen flitting about from tree to tree, leaping from branch to branch, and flying 40 and 50 feet aloft through 50 feet of space separating one tree from another.

WARNING FOR FIRST OFFENSE FINES LATER

Enforcement of the city anti-parking ordinance is beginning to raise a small storm of protests from business men, who have been used to leaving their cars in front of their places of business. It would not be surprising if a delegation were on hand at the next meeting of the city council to request modification or repeal of the ordinance.

Traffic Officer Wynn, as good as his word, has been making arrests without favor and quite a stack of cards bearing names of offending autoists has accumulated in the police court.

Police Judge Leavitt, in dealing with all offenders who appear—a number have not appeared—announces a policy of no penalty for the first offense. The court believes, in view of the fact that an ordinance prohibiting parking on Main street for more than 20 minutes, consecutively, has existed for two or three years without enforcement, that auto owners are entitled to some grace and warning. Second appearance in court will be met with a fine, but to first offenders the judge delivers a caution and lets them go.

The council at its next meeting will probably take steps to remedy the Fifth street discrepancy, where, through clerical error, the ordinance bars parking on the west side of Fifth between Main and Klamath, when it was meant to clear the east side of cars that might bar the speedy progress of the fire truck.

The court ran up against this error early in the crusade. On his way to the city hall a salesman friend hailed Judge Leavitt and asked him to direct him into a proper parking stall on Fifth street. Knowing the intention of the ordinance the judge shunted his friend onto the wrong side and in half an hour he was in the police clutches.

A little later he showed up in court. "Damn it," he said, "I thought that you at least would know what you were talking about."

It cost the court a cigar and an apology.

Must Not Block Hydrants
Traffic officer Wynn said today that the next step in law enforcement would be in regard to the ordinance provision—section 4, subdivision 19, ordinance No. 516—making it unlawful to stop a vehicle within 30 feet of a street corner or fire hydrant.

Charles E. Hughes Joins Actors In Paying Tribute to Harding

On the same day that sixty members of the Harding-Coolidge Theatrical League journeyed from New York to Marion to greet Senator Harding, Charles E. Hughes dropped off the train at the now famous Ohio town to visit the Republican nominee for President. Al Tolson, president of the league, immediately elected Mr. Hughes a member, and together they played an important part in the day's program. Here we see Senator Harding, Eugene O'Brien, motion picture star, and Mr. Hughes.
