The University of Santo Tomas, in Manila, is twenty-five years older than Harvard University.

Two Frenchmen recently played a billiard match in Paris lasting 24 hours without any interval. It is estimated that during the game the contestants walked nearly 30 miles.

Believing in the benefits to be derived from outdoor sports, an Indiana schoolmaster offered a prize for the boy who returned to school after the summer holidays with the brownest face.

Worshippers at Buddhist temples in Japan invariably wash their hands in a fountain at the entrance before making their supplications. Formerly the priests hung towels there. Now the merchants of Tokio and other cities furnish the temples with free paper towels, reserving the privilege of printing their advertisements on them.

COMING SUNDAY—

"THE RIDERS OF THE DAWN"

from Zane Grey's great story—

"The Desert of Wheat"

Five hand-to-hand, to-the-death fights in one picture is strenuous work for any film star. Even husky Roy Stewart, who held a heavyweight boxing championship, and was champion single scull rower on the Pacific coast for two years, considers it quite sufficient. That is what he had to do in "Riders of the Dawn," the all-star production from Zane Grey's novel, "The Desert of Wheat," which is the attraction at the Liberty theater on Sunday.

A classified Ad will sell it.

Charles Infroit.

The most precious thing in the world—radium—has cost Charles Infroit, scientist of Paris, his left hand and his right arm, and he wants artificial arms now to continue his research. Infroit is head of the nitrate works, and his experiments with radium are among the most valuable in science. During the war he devised a "compass" to locate splinters of bullets in skull, and was made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor. He lost his right arm first and then several fingers of his left hand, and finally the whole hand, never hesitating at the sacrifice he was making for science.

Primrose Keeps Good Time.

In the garden of Charles D. Emery of Hornell, N. Y., is an old-fashioned English primrose which opens its flowers. Mr. Emery says, promptly at eight o'clock every evening and keeps them open exactly one hour. One evening curfew, which is supposed to ring at nine o'clock, was two minutes early, but the primrose was not fooled. It took the extra two minutes, and folded its petals promptly on the hour, as marked by the stopwatch of an observer.
