CHANGES IN MOTHER EARTH

Constantly Going On, and Some of Them Are of Immense Consequence to Human Race.

The proofs submitted by Prof. E. L. Moseley of the Ohio state normal school at Bowling Green that the waters of Lake Erie and several other lakes gradually are becoming deeper is of more than ordinary interest both in scientific and business circles. The information is of peculiar value just at this time, in connection with the campaign for the St. Lawrence river cut off, which is designed to make Toledo and other lake cities virtually ocean ports, says the Blade of that city.

Professor Moseley likens the lake beds to tilting platters. The tilt under Lake Erie is of such character that the outlet at the east end is rising, with consequent deepening of water levels at the western end in the vicinity of Toledo and the famous Bass Islands. Nature, which already has done so much for Toledo, is adding something to the score.

In this connection it is interesting also that scientists and engineers have noted somewhat similar phenomena in the western states. It is asserted that the coast of California is rising at the rate of about six inches a century, and that recent earthquakes there may be attributed to inequalities in the movement of the earth's crust. Measurements by engineers have disclosed also that Great Salt Lake in Utah, is receding gradually to lower level. It has no known outlet, but evaporation exceeds the inflow and rainfall so that within two decades the lake boundaries have receded quite noticeably.

The geological story is written so slowly, as a rule, that it can be read only by such scientists as Professor Moseley, who has devoted the greater part of his life to research and educational work in natural history.

Professor Moseley, by observation and deduction, draws the conclusion that it was possible for the Indians, 1,000 years ago, to reach the main land from Kelley's Island by swimming and wading only a few streams and marshes. Within the next few years it is more than possible ocean-going ships manned by polyglot crews assembled from distant and strange ports will be piloted through lake channels once so shallow that soundings were made with the canoe paddle in the sinewy grasp of an Indian chief.
