

"PUNCHING" TO POLO

DEL MONTE, Cal.—"Teddy Roosevelt," two years ago a cow pony on a Salinas range near here, has developed into such a fast polo pony here that he has been sent east to try for a place on an American team which is to endeavor to lift an international polo cup in England next year. Hugh Drury, Del Monte, who developed the pony, is certain he will place on the team. "Teddy" is a dark bay, nine years old and for five years was the mount of the foreman of a cattle ranch.

CHINESE MUST SUPPORT OWN GOVERNMENT

PEKING, Aug. 28.—(By Mail) Parting advice to China, given by Dr. Paul S. Reinsch, former American minister to China and later counselor to the Chinese government, included a statement that "it is plain that foreign nations cannot be expected to support a government which does not have the support of its own citizens."

Dr. Reinsch's advice was contained in a long analysis of the weaknesses and requirements of the Chinese government. He submitted the analysis just before he tendered his resignation as counselor.

"While a republic in form, there has not been a continuous representation of the people in the government" was another statement. Dr. Reinsch also declared that any recognition by a foreign government rested only on convenience and did not involve support or approval.

"At present the government is fatally defective through lack of a representative parliament" he pointed out and then sounded a warning that "recognition given by foreign governments may at any time be withdrawn if the government fails to attain authority through gaining confidence of the people."

Dr. Reinsch traced the history of the provisional constitution of 1912, which has since been complicated by election of a new "extra-legal" parliament and by migrations and divisions into many factions of the body which originally preceded it.

He believed that existing groupings and organizations of the people should be made the basis of new people's constitutional convention, in which quality should prevail rather than numbers.

"Should the government fail to respond to the popular demand for representative institutions," he asserted. "It would also fail to secure public confidence although it might honestly devote itself to a policy of reconstruction *** and would have neither foreign nor domestic support except at ruinous cost to the nation."

He recommended simplicity in form. A highly centralized government would be a mistake, he said. The provinces, because of tradition and experience and size should be most competent to carry on the functions of government. He cited two departments which should be especially developed in order to promote the welfare of the nation. They were justice and communications.

China should utilize foreign aid, he said, to build in the next ten years 20,000 miles of railway and 20,000 miles of roads. This he asserted would increase the national wealth three-fold. He further recommended adequate port facilities for taking care of international trade which he said was bound in the near future to assume unthought-of proportions.

Taking up the subject of reform of the judiciary, Dr. Reinsch expressed the opinion that abolition of extraterritoriality could only be considered after China's judicial system had been reorganized on the basis of complete legal remedies for infringement of individual rights and recognition of the right to life, liberty, etc.

Better facilities for dissemination of accurate economic and financial information were necessary. He thought it possible that the provinces might better be allowed to handle educational policies, assisted by the central government through the establishment of universities.

In conclusion he reverted again to the necessity for gaining the confidence of the people. "The efforts of Yuan Shih-kai and Chang Hsun to force China's development back into dynastic currents had proved," he said, "that the Chinese people do not desire to return to an outlived system. The more recent attempt to found political power on military organization and foreign financial support crumbled in a week before intense popular disapproval. To oppose the growing consciousness of the Chinese people would be like trying to stem the tide of the Yangtze by means of an artificial dam. Wise statesmen will rally themselves with this force which it is blindness to ignore."

ALUMNI WILL GATHER NOV. 20

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, Corvallis, Oct. 4.—The annual alumni homecoming will be held the week end of the Oregon game, November 20, the greater O. A. C. committee has announced. The biggest and jolliest celebration ever held in the history of O. A. C. is also the plan of those in charge.

The annual bag rush between the sophomore and freshmen, the big "pep" rally and freshman bonfire are part of the schedule of events. The alumni will be entertained at the various fraternities and will be given an alumni luncheon. The varsity "O" dance in the evening after the game is being planned. It is to be an elaborate affair this year, according to the committee, although the plans are not complete.

All fraternities and clubs will be asked to co-operate with the greater O. A. C. committee and announce the event to their own alumni. Fifteen hundred of the old grads are expected to wend their way back to the campus for a few days, to renew acquaintances, take part in the celebrations, and look over the new crop of students. University of Oregon will send at least 2000 as an escort to their football team, according to the estimates this year.
