EVENING HERALD

PRICE DROP IS DUE TO LABOR READJUSTMENT

On inquiring from A. E. Dunham of the Dunham Auto company, distributors of Franklin and Studebaker automobiles, as to the late drop in the prices of automobiles he made this statement:

"The drop came about simply through the adjustment of labor. The factories were paying $5 for 8 hours, but in these 8 hours they were practically only getting an equivalent of what they got in two and one half hours a few years ago. Of course, this forced them to put their men on what is termed piece work, to get the work through at all, and give them a reasonable production of cars, as on this piece work schedule the same man would turn out a larger volume and receive as much as $18 to $25 per day.

"When the money situation began to tighten up some of the factories found they were over producing. In consequence they cut their force to one-third. For instance, the Overland was employing 15,000 and they cut to 4,500 and put these to work on only two-thirds time, or four days a week. These men flocked to the other factories and were put to work at $8 a day and actually did a day's work, which enabled these facories to entirely discontinue the piece work plan. They are now getting the same amount of work done for on an average of one-third that they were paying six months ago.

"As to a further decline in prices, this is improbable and cannot come until there is a drop in the prices of material and this will not occur until the present supply is exhausted and labor conditions adjust themselves as they have in the automobile factories.

"The federal trade commission at Washington is now attempting to force all manufacturers to discontinue the practice of guaranteeing prices, on the ground that such practice artificially stimulates high prices and prevent declines and the return to approximate pre-war economic conditions. You can see the logic of their contention, namely, manufacturers who guarantee prices are merely trying to sustain artificial price levels as long as they can."

"Doctrine of Atonement."
