MADE BRITISH NAVY GREAT

According to Magazine, the "Round Pond" in Hyde Park Awoke Ambition of Youth.

Great Britain always has been a great business nation, but she only attained her position of sea supremacy in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries.

It came about in this way. A queen, Catherine, consort of George II., was interested in laying out royal parks, and in that end of Hyde park that is now called Kensington gardens she decided whimsically that a patch of water was needed.

It was sea imagination that the Round pond awoke in Great Britain, and without it the greatest of fleets would never survive.

There should be a Round pond for boy ship experimenters in every part of the United States.—The Nation's Business.

USE TOO MANY BIG WORDS?

Modern Generation is "Called Down" by Writer for the Employment of "Mouth Fillers."

Months are getting larger. The reason is simple. Words are getting bigger.

And in order to make simple things complex, language architects are adding to the front and rear of ordinary words constantly.

It has come to pass that the bigger the word the less it means. For instance, "congressional" does not mean any more than its first syllable, "con."

Movements against space-eating words have not appeared to move much. Simplified spelling was popular, but many persons thought it didn't look "classy" on commercial and social stationery.

Half-headed men who spend their lives on orating committees continue to announce that they "advocate a co-ordination of facilities," which they might simply say: "Let's work together."

We pity the ordinary Zulu who talks in grunts—but he is years ahead of us as far as concentrated language is concerned. For instance, his mere grunt means: "Kill that garrulous missionary, and put him in the pot for dinner."—Life.

DIFFER OVER WHAT IS JUNK

Opinions of Men and Women Show a Duplicated Variance as to Important Subject.

"Junk is that pile of old clothes my husband doesn't wear and won't let me give away. Says some day he will wear it on a fishing trip. That pile of magazines he is saving till he finds time to read them is junk; that collection of pipes he never smokes is junk. Oh, if you want to know what junk is ask any married woman. She knows."

"Junk? Well, I don't know a better way to define the word than to give an example. My wife has chests and bureau drawers filled with tablecloths and remnants of calico, lace and all that sort of stuff which she never uses. That's junk. She has all her old hats in that large box on top of the closet shelf. That's junk. We are only two in family, but she has enough dishes to serve twenty people and enough pots and pans to cook for forty. That's junk. Oh, I should say offhand that junk is the accumulation of things around a house for which a woman has no immediate use and may never use. That's a pretty good definition of the word. Ask any man. He'll tell you the same."

What do you think is junk?—New York Evening Sun.

AMERICA WORLD IN ITSELF

Englishman Writes Enviously of Our Variety of Climate and Other Blessings.

Here in England we settle down in a town and only a violent exertion of will power can extricate us. In the United States a man may try twenty different towns and twenty different states before he finds one that suits him.

Here we have practically no choice of climate (or lack of climate). On the other side you can get the bitter cold of North Dakota or the almost tropical heat of Florida. You can be blown to pieces on the prairies or lie snug in a cleft of the hills looking over the Pacific. You can spin cotton in Connecticut or grow it in Georgia. You have a world to yourself, and one of the most beautiful worlds that has ever been discovered.

That is why people go to the United States, and why they stop there. They get freedom. It is no more enthusiastic phrase, it is the basic fact of life.

Where Do Poets Compose?

But do poets ever write in gardens? Swift, who was by way of being a poet, built himself a garden seat at Moor park when he served Sir William Temple, but I don't know that he wrote poetry there. Rather, it was a place for reading. Pope, in his prodigious days, wrote at Twickenham, with the sound of his artificial waterfall in his ears, and he walked to take the air in his grotto along the Thames. But do poets really wander beneath the moon to think their verses? Do they compose "on summer eve by haunted stream"? I doubt whether Gray conceived his "Elegy" in an actual graveyard. I smell oil. One need not see the thing described upon the very moment. Shelley wrote of mountains, the awful range of Caucasus, but his eye at the time looked on sunny Italy. Ibsen wrote of the north when living in the south. When Bunyan wrote of the delectable mountains he was snug inside a jail.—Charles S. Brooks in the Century Magazine.

Preserved Husband's Heart.

The heart of John Balliol, lord of Barnard castle, who died in 1293, was embalmed and inclosed in an ivory casket richly-enameled with silver. His affectionate widow, Devorgilla, used to have this casket placed on the table every day when she ate her meals, and ordered it to be laid on her own heart when she was herself placed in the tomb. She was buried, according to her own direction, near the altar in New Abbey, which she herself had founded in Galloway, and the casket containing her husband's heart was placed on her bosom. From this incident the abbey received the name of Dolce Cor, or Sweetheart Abbey, and for its arms "bore in chief a heart over two pastoral staffs, and in base three mullets of five points."

Elephants Killed for Tusks.

The tusk of the African elephant is the best and greatest source of the ivory of commerce, and it is estimated that 70,000 of these animals are killed annually for the purpose of securing the tusks. Some tusks reach the length of nine feet and weigh more than 200 pounds.

Extremes.

"Young Miss Flyaway has no sense of the fitness of things in setting a table."

"Why not?" "She'll put angel cake side by side with deviled ham."

The Time.

"Is it admissible at any time for a man to pay attentions to a married woman?" "Certainly, if she is his wife."

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK ABOUT WOOD? Maybe you do not realize that SLAB WOOD IS BODY-WOOD. The only difference being that the slab-wood comes already split. There is more bark in the slab, that is true, but there is as much heat in the bark as there is in the wood, so in a cord of slab you buy as much heat as in a cord of body or limbs for much less money. If the Wood Dealer Sold Service We do not sell current; we sell service. That sounds odd doesn't it? Well, suppose the wood dealer sold service instead of wood, he would tend to your furnace and your range, take away the ashes and clean the flues. You would buy so much heat. Now you buy so much light, although you pay according to the current you consume. But the service is performed for you by this company at the substations and power plants. This is what we want to give you—efficient service. It is the aim of this company to have none but satisfied customers. No matter what it is, if you have a grievance, or are dissatisfied about your bill or do not understand our rates, please come in and see us or write us about it. Life and Death a Unity.

Life is a state which follows upon death. Death is a state which precedes life. Which of us understands the laws that govern their succession?

The life of man is the resultant of forces. The aggregation of these forces is life; their dispersion, death. If, then, life and death are but consecutive states of existence, what cause for sorrow have I?

And so it is that all things are but phases of unity. What men delight in is the spiritual essence of life. What they loathe is the material corruption of death. But this state of corruption gives place to that state of spirituality and that state of spirituality gives place in turn to this state of corruption. Therefore we may say that all in the universe is comprised in unity, and therefore the inspired among us have adopted unity as their criterion.—H. A. Giles, in "Translated Gems From Chinese Literature."

Growing Roses in France.

The French farmers set their bushes in rows about four feet apart on the gentle slope of the hills, and, so far as is possible, where they have a southeastern exposure. Young shoots are taken from five-year-old bushes, and, when they have grown, they are trimmed to about a foot in height, and such buds as appear are picked off, to preserve the vitality in the bush and to assure a large crop for the second year.

After the bush attains the age of seven years it does not produce the quantity or quality of oil, so it is pulled up and a new one planted in its place. The rose harvest begins in April, runs through May and June.

Water Stored in Form of Ice.

With the idea of getting away from the expensive construction of dams for the purpose of storing water, the suggestion has been made that the water be stored in winter in the shape of ice and allowed to melt as it may be desired in summer time. This would insure water in sufficient quantities for small irrigation systems at least and certainly would cut down the expense of storing. In addition to this it would afford work for a certain class of labor which usually is not occupied at this season of the year.

Meaning of Word "Hogan."

The hut of the Navajo Indians is called a "hogan." It consists of a conical framework covered with poles, bark and earth. The main beams turn north, south and west, while the entrance is on the east side. Sometimes the shelter of the Pima tribes are also called hogans.
