AT THE THEATERS

"The Hellion," which shows at the Liberty tonight is a delightfully weird and spectacular emotion-play. In which the threads of hypnotism, dual characterization, lost memory and love are produced with revived effect.

In "Peggy Rebels," which is on at the Liberty theatre tomorrow, blonde Mary Miles Minter delivers a clever piece of acting that will satisfy her most critical admirer. She does not get the usual extraneous aid from pretty clothes, and artistic environment, for, with the exception of the ball sequence, she wears torn jeans and a ragged blouse all the way through, and her home is the stranded hulk of an ancient schooner. That is a real tribute to the genuineness of both her beauty and her art.
