No Legal Ballots

Discarded in No. 7

Talk of a recount of votes in the county clerk contest on the ground that a number of ballots were thrown out in various precincts because the cross was marked after the name instead of between the name and number, apparently is without foundation.

Mrs. Ida B. Grimes, chairman of the day board in Precinct No. 7, one of the precincts where it was alleged that a number of such ballots were not counted, says that one partially defective ballot was thrown out by the day board, and she understood the night board discarded two or three defective ballots.

Where the intention of the voter was plain, however, the ballot was counted as the law provides.

THEY HAVE A KICK COMING

The Johnstone Furniture company has filed a legitimate kick with The Herald office. Having decided to offer special Christmas inducements, it took the only right course and instructed The Herald to "tell the world about it"—that is, the best part of the world, for The Herald's subscription list covers said best part like a blanket. However, in transferring the advertising order, the signature was inadvertently changed to the "Perkins Furniture House," for which sin of omission and transmission, The Herald is duly penitent and trusts that prospective givers of Christmas gifts will look up the advertisements which appear today over the right signatures, and govern themselves accordingly.
