William Collier in
"THE SERVANT QUESTION?"

A laugh-provoking answer to the eternal problem of the servant question.

Fatty Arbuckle in
"THE ROUGH HOUSE"

TOMORROW
"OUT OF THE STORM"

A thrilling picture produced by Rex Beach and Samuel Goldwyn. It's a big attraction.

AT THE STAR THEATRE
"The Servant Question," an all-wool-and-a-yard wide farce comedy, in which brilliant humor sets a rapid pace for five full reels, serves as the medium of transfer from stage to screen of one of the greatest drawing cards yet to appear before the American public—William Collier.

William Collier, for years one of the premier entertainers of the play-going public, holds the undisputed title of the "prince of light comedy," a title that is deservedly his by virtue of years of sincere effort on his part to give the American people the best there was in him. The fact he rose to the highest pinnacle of popularity as a comedy entertainer is evidence that he succeeded in his effort to give his best, for there is no actor of stage or screen who is more generously endowed with natural entertaining talent than William Collier.

In "Out of the Storm," showing at the Star tomorrow, you'll see the most terrific shipwreck ever flashed upon a screen. A man and a girl are swept over the rail of a sinking steamer. He swims with her to a floating spar. They cling to it for a night and a day and are rescued, but never meet again till five years later. Love sang in that terrible gale.

AT THE LIBERTY THEATRE
Joseph J. Dowling, who since his wonderful delineation of the Patriarch in "The Miracle Man," has come to be known as "The Miracle Man of the Screen," comes to the Liberty theatre tonight. As the gallant old Kentucky Colonel in the picturization of Opie Read's well-known novel, "The Kentucky Colonel," released by Hodkinson, Joseph Dowling is said to even surpass the marvelous characterization of the spiritualistic miracle man.

The story tells of the beautiful and imperishable friendship between two old Kentucky gentlemen, one a general and the other a colonel—titles which they have borne from Civil war days. In spite of the supreme test which comes when the general is led to believe that the colonel has for many years been deceiving him in regard to his relations with his, the general's wife the clear white flame of their love for each other continues to burn brightly. In the wood where they meet to fight a duel, neither fires at the other. Instead they fire straight up into the air, for neither could find the courage or the desire to kill the other.

The poet Cowper tried to commit suicide twice and failed, after which he wrote the famous hymn, "God Moves in a Mysterious Way."
