Who Wrecks Marriage, Man or Woman?—Both Says Ada Mae Weeks

ADA MAE WEEKS
Playing the leading love part in "Jim Jam Jems."

"It takes two to make a quarrel. I believe that the wrecking of marriage is a fifty-fifty proposition. Give me a man whom I love and I'll make him love me. There will be no eternal triangle or quarrels with us. Disagreements that finally lead to the divorce court only come if two people are willing to quarrel. Either one of the two can make quarreling impossible. I feel that with love present, nothing else would matter to me. I would do what every wife should do—make my husband love me by dressing, acting and being to him what he would have me—a sweetheart. And he could not help doing the same for me. If a husband's first care is to please his wife, and a wife's first care is to please her husband, there will be no home wrecking."

AT THE STAR THEATRE

Some remarkable true-to-life scenes of New York's underworld are a feature of Enid Bennett's new photoplay, "The False Road," which will be at the Star theatre tonight. The pretty star has the role of a girl-crook, member of a notorious gang. One of the most colorful episodes shows the banquet given to her sweetheart upon the occasion of his release from Sing Sing prison. The gang leader is the toastmaster and the entertainment is of a most jazzy character. If you think crooks are troubled with uneasy consciences and don't enjoy themselves in private, this scene will prove an eye-opener. But the guest of honor at the height of the revelry announces that he intends to go straight. It completely spoils the party. Moreover, it leads to an absorbing series of adventures that finally end happily for the two chief characters involved. Lloyd Hughes is Miss Bennett's leading man and the picture was directed by Thomas H. Ince by Fred Niblo. It is a Paramount Artercraft release.

VAUDEVILLE AT MONDALE MAKES HIT WITH CROWD

The DeBell and Cleveland artists are certainly winning themselves into the hearts of the patrons of the Mondale theatre by their comic songs and jests that are new to the theatre going public. Applause after applause was given them last night at both performances and the little theatre was packed to the doors with vaudeville fans who went away with their sides aching. They will stay throughout the week with a complete change of stunts Friday night. After they leave it will be a long time before they are forgotten.

Mr. Crawford, the operator, put over the two big features, Dorothy Dalton, in the "Flame of the Yukon"—Alaska's greatest story, and "Love and the Law," from the Saturday Evening Post story, "The Troop Train," in a way that more than gave satisfaction to all. The way he has of handling the new equipment in the operating room makes the wonderful picture drama of the screen stand out, and the public have shown their appreciation of his efforts.

THREE-TERM PLAN CONTINUES

The faculty of the University of Oregon has decided to retain the three term plan instead of going back to the two term plan. With the summer school session, this gives the students four opportunities a year to enter the university.

The shortest taxi ride in Berlin costs $5.

Austria has a law requiring every employer to retain as many workmen on his books as he had before the war.

Pupils Discuss Many Phases of School Work

Several essays written by members of the seventh and eighth grades of the Central school have been received by the Herald, and a perusal of them discloses the fact that they represent careful application by the pupils and a system of teaching that is producing gratifying results. The subjects discussed in the essays are timely, but do not carry the interest for the public which is attached to the ability, application and teaching methods followed in their discussion.

Richard Peck, a seventh grader, discusses the football situation at his school, and incidentally tells of a victory over the second high school team. Jimmy Eifendahl, a seventh grade boy also, tells about an arithmetic contest, and Dena Molatare, a classmate, supplements his information. "Borrowing Books" from the school library, is discussed by Marjorie Love Peyton. Marjorie is a seventh grade girl, too. A tale of "Two Sheriffs" is unfolded by Gordon Smith of the seventh grade. The officers keep order in the marching lines.

Donald Veatch, an eighth grade boy, tells about book week, instituted to encourage the reading of good books, and Harry Molatare, in his story, states that the Central school should have play sheds to be used during bad weather. He suggests swings, basketballs and things like that.

George Bradley, another eighth grader, also believes that play sheds would be just the thing to make things more pleasant for the children during play time.

Eighth grade officers, who will not be permitted to serve more than two terms, or two months, were elected at the Central school a short time ago. These are the officers: President, Herbert Phillips; vice president, Claudena Witts; secretary, Florence Hector; librarian, Edith Newbanks, and sheriff, Loren Sharp. The chief duties of the last-named officer, apparently, is to arrest any pupil guilty of talking while in line.

CITY WILL CLOSE TOMORROW TO OBSERVE THANKSGIVING

Banks, schools, city and country buildings and private business establishments will close tomorrow in observance of Thanksgiving. The postoffice will be closed all day. There will be no city deliveries.

We're Thankful

That during the past year, when prices soared and the cost of living has been bearing down upon all of us—we are thankful that we have been able to sell our clothing and other merchandise at a price that meant a real saving to our customers.

We're Thankful—
That judicious buying will enable us to continue our policy of keeping prices well within your reach, a policy that is building up for us a patronage of which we feel justly proud.
