SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1920.

FINIS IS WRITTEN.

COMING EVENTS cast their shadows before and the wise shape their course accordingly. More than two months ago The Herald, with full realization, guided solely by its desire to stand for the right, adopted a policy in regard to the courthouse fight and the election of a county court that made it a target for bitter condemnation from those whose opinion it valued—and would still accept gladly on many matters —and downright slander and villification from small-souled hirelings for whose opinion it does not care one iota.

Superior organization and sheer weight of numbers misled the unthinking ONE lone voice crying in the wilderness against the day of reckoning to come, went unheeded.
A crushing defeat of the candidates we espoused but strengthened our amazement at the blindness of the voters, who with all the facts before them, were unable to see the situation that must be brought about when the supreme court handed down a decision in the courthouse litigation.

Our faith in the soundness of our position, however, was not shaken, and yesterday's decision but vindicated the judgment that led us into an unwelcome but righteous course.

The decision is so sweeping in its language, so sound in its application of the law to the facts, that it closes every avenue for the expenditure of further money on the Hot Springs site and levels every argument against immediate occupation of the Main street courthouse.

This was the situation that The Herald foresaw many months ago, and it was its unshaken conviction that this outcome would surely follow the judgment of the final tribunal that placed it in a position where its "friends viewed its conduct with doubt and its loss with contempt."

Naturally, the supreme court decision is gratifying. The Herald does not want to be vainglorious or to inflict a boreome "I-told-you-so" screed upon its readers. After the election the Main street advocates reviewed a bit of wholesome advice from R. A. Emmitt, so admirable for its brevity and neighborly spirit, that we cannot refrain from republishing the salient paragraphs, paraphrasing a trifle by substituting decision of the court for decision of the people.

The supreme court has spoken, and all admit that the decision must be respected. Each should return to his own private affairs with that cheerfulness that marked each community before the unfortunate conditions arose.

Forget the past and look to the future. Grasp the hand in friendship of those opposed to your convictions.

Extend hospitality to friend and foe alike. Invite your neighbor by your cheerfulness to do likewise. Lay down the gauntlet of peace and declare that war shall be no more.

Invite happiness and prosperity to all alike.

Hope, and hope hard, that no such conditions shall again ever confront us. Invite business, invite labor, invite people, in fact everything calculated to make Klamath county the best place on earth to live in.

THE VALUE OF VALUABLES

Many Things Go to Make Up Consideration of the Real Worth of an Article.

Value in a commodity depends, according to certain standard economists, on utilities of time, place and events. An article is worth what its owner can get for it. What he can get for it depends on where it is, who wants it, for what purpose and the number of bidders.

The Manchester Guardian published an interview with Rykov, president of the supreme council of national economists in soviet Russia. Rykov indicated that some valuables were less valuable in these days than formerly, while others were more so. The soviets, he said, would let go of their platinum slowly in trade with the outside world —slowly, that is, in comparison with their release of other articles.

"In platinum we have a world monopoly," said Rykov, "and consequently can afford to wait. Diamonds and gold, however—they can have as much as they want of such rubbish.
Platinum is different and we are in no hurry to part with it. Diamonds and gold ornaments, the jewelry of the czars, we are ready to give to any king in Europe who fancies them if he can give us some less ornamental but more useful locomotives."

Similarly there is no doubt that not a few American manufacturers would willingly trade diamonds and gold and motor cars and electric runabouts for box cars—plain, old, railroad red box cars—ready on the sidetrack to haul factory output from point of production to point of consumption.—Chicago News.

NOT MUCH GOES TO WASTE

Machines That Make for Economy Are Now in General Use in Facories in America.

Recovery of valuable portions of materials formerly wasted is more and more a feature of American industrial economy. For many years there has been in use in many of the large engineering works a centrifugal separating machine which removes the oil from iron and steel turnings or borings and thus permits it to be used over again. This idea which underlies this machine has now been carried farther and applied to the removal of the dust and dirt which unavoidably collects in oil used in the lubricating systems of marine and other large engines. The new machine is very similar in form and operates on the same principle as the now well-known centrifugal cream separator. The foul oil is fed continuously into the machine through a strainer which catches any gross particles, precisely as milk is fed into the cream separator. The purified oil escapes continuously, while the dust and dirt collect on the inner surface of the separating drum.
Provision is made by which the attendant can instantly tell when the machine is choked with the deposited impurities.

Roman Arch Revived.

Minneapolis, which, with its twin city, St. Paul, is now the largest city, except St. Louis, west of the Mississippi, and has the largest flour mills in the world, will soon also boast the longest concrete arch upon the footstool as part of a new bridge traversing the Father of Waters. The arch has a length of 400 feet. It consists of two separate ribs each 12 feet wide, which are 17 feet thick at the base and eight feet thick at the crown, with a rise of 88 feet.

The main arch is flanked at each end by two auxiliary arches, of which one has a length of 150 feet and the other 55; making the total extent of the structure 1,032 feet, abutments included.

Fair Bathers in Hard Luck.

While ten exclusive society matrons were bathing at Marinette, Wis., in the cool waters of a little lake, on the bank within a dressing tent by ten piles of clothing—crepe de chine, charmuse, flit lace, silk Teddy bears, dainty corset covers, envelope chemises and ruffled bloomers. A small boy playing Indian came along, was tempted by the flimsy heap of lace, scratched a match on the seat of his ragged trousers, and before the ladies could say "Annette Kellerman!" the dressing tent and all its contents had gone up in flame and smoke.—Boston Globe.

The day of the great naval review off Port Melbourne, on the occasion of the prince of Wales' visit, was also memorable in a minor way for the triumph of Victorian railway organization. Electric trains carried 55,000 sightseers, in about four and one-half hours, to and from Port Melbourne, a total distance of four miles.
Only five trains were utilized for the whole service, yet it was possible to maintain a service of trains at intervals of less than three minutes. Thus the huge crowd was handled without a hitch.

Italy's Plague of Fleas.
To foreigners life in Italy is just one darned itch after another, because of the annoying prevalence of fleas, which seemingly do not bother the natives, but exist in staggering quantities to those who go there for visits and sightseeing. Kenneth L.
Roberts says in the Saturday Evening Post that there is no hotel, baggage restaurant, train or railway station that does not, at a moment's notice, provide fleas for the foreigner who may step into one of them.
