THE LIBERTY THEATRE

It is always intensely interesting to see how a book that one has enjoyed and admired between covers fares when it reaches the hands of the motion picture producer.

Millions of readers found in Samuel Merwin's best-seller, "The Honey Bee," a story of unusual theme, fascinating character studies and extraordinary appeal—the story of a woman in a revolt against her empty, loveless, childless life; a woman between whom and the little honey bee the author traced a wonderfully interesting analogy. Millions found it not only an entertaining story, but one with the rare quality of having the brain-cells sometimes to do, yet also at times wrinkling the corners of the mouth.

Down the Line

When asked how their business was:

- The coal dealer said: Slack.
- The police judge said: Fine.
- The junk dealer said: Picking up.
- The gunnaker said: Booming.
- The tailor said: Increasing.
- The fruit dealer said: Rotten.
- The undertaker said: Dead.
- The thief said: Quiet.
- The packer said: On the Hog.
- The writing teacher said: Flourishing.
- The Clairvoyant said: Medium.

Oh! Joyful Land

On Monday, September 27th, the New York papers published a dispatch from Geneva, Switzerland, dated September 26th. It read:

"The inhabitants of the village of Martigny face the prospect of being able to drink only wine and beer for some time, the result of the town waterworks being washed away yesterday by the flood which swept through the Chamounix valley, caused by the bursting of a glacier pocket."

A local woman recently ordered some fur coats sent up on approval Saturday, and returned them on Monday morning with a message "None were suitable." The next day she received a courteous communication from the head of the fur department returning her prayer-book which had been found in the pocket of one of the coats.

"I understand you have told your wife to throw the ouija board into the woodbox."

"Yes, I'm not going to have any such superstitious nonsense deciding questions around my house. When I come to a point where I can't make up my mind what to do, I simply flip the coin."

Dear Doctor: Your bill received and I fail to see where I owe you two dollars. You simply wrote a prescription which I never had filled and which I am enclosing. Hastily.

Telephone Credit

The telephone company will be compelled to borrow large amounts of money in the next few years, not only to extend its service to new subscribers, but to take care of the constantly increasing use of the service by present subscribers.

A lender in business will demand of a borrower ample security and will insist that its value be maintained without deterioration. He must be shown that this security has an assured earning power. He must be satisfied that his investment is safe; that it can be disposed of at any time without loss and that it will bring him a continuous return.

At the present time this company's operations in Oregon are conducted at a deficit. Its expenses are greater than its revenue. No return is being received by its stockholders from their property in Oregon. Not even the interest on its bonds properly chargeable to its Oregon properties is being paid from Oregon receipts.

With new capital scarce and commanding high rates of return, a business showing operating results such as these will find it difficult, if not impossible, to secure money for its necessities.

We assume that the people of Oregon wish to treat the utilities doing business in this state justly and fairly, and in this belief we have asked the Public Service Commission to approve a schedule of rates increasing our revenues. The amount asked for is relatively small to the individual rate payer, but the aggregate will place us in a position where we can obtain the outside capital necessary in our operations.

Under present conditions an adequate telephone service—efficient and sufficient—is dependent upon higher rates.
