

MILLING IN TRANSIT RATE IS GRANTED

PORTLAND, Dec. 15.—The Southern Pacific has granted a milling route in transit rate to Oregon lumbermen thereby making it possible to ship unfinished lumber to eastern points under a single transcontinental rate and have the finishing done enroute. The rate is granted for a period of one year, beginning Jan. 1, 1921.

BEND MILL WILL KEEP ONE SHIFT ON ALL WINTER

(Bend Press) Except for the annual closing down of two or three weeks for repairs, The Brooks-Scanlon company's mill and plant will make no further cut in production this winter than has already been done, according to a statement issued by Manager H. K. Brooks.

The mill is now operating only one shift. This the statement explains is due to the fact that the company has too much lumber now on hand in the yards, with no visible market.

A recognition of the need for a post-war adjustment and belief that that adjustment is to be made within the next few months so that full production can be resumed in the spring is the keynote of Mr. Brooks' communication, which follows:

"For the first time in the history of our operations in Bend, we have found it necessary to curtail production. There is now far more lumber in the yard than we ever intended to have on hand at any one time, and owing to heavy carrying charge, high cost of operation, etc., it would be most unwise to add to the congestion. With the idea of keeping our steady men employed and maintaining a complete organization, which is of benefit not only to ourselves but to the whole community, we have been running full steam, but have now reached the point where we must not manufacture lumber any faster than we can sell and ship it.

"The country is now passing through a period of readjustment of general conditions. War-time activity in business, war-time prices of all commodities, and war-time extravagance, and standards of living have been abnormal and cannot be expected to continue consequently there is a general slowing down which it is hoped and believed will soon result in putting the country on normal peacetime footing. The sooner that point is reached, the better it will be for all of us.

"We are doing the utmost to dispose of our product at fair market prices, and our employees can rest assured that the minute an improvement in demand enables us to reduce our stock of lumber we shall proceed to operate the mill and camps to full capacity. In the meantime, unless found impracticable, it is our intention to continue running the saw mill one shift until it is closed down two or three weeks for annual repairs. The planing mill

PINE NEARLY GONE FROM PINE VALLEY

HALFWAY, Or., Dec. 15.—Cutting down the last piece of pine timber in Pine valley has started, the work being done on the H. W. B. Robinson farm near Halfway. Two wood cutting outfits are sawing the trees into 16-inch wood, cutting on shares. There is an 80-acre tract heavily wooded with yellow pine, which will require two or three winters for cutting. Not many years ago Pine valley was thickly grown with pines, but it has been cut out and the land but under cultivation until in many places only an occasional pine can be seen. A few small clumps of trees and pine thickets are left, just enough to tell how Pine valley got its name.
