Own Your Own Home Campaign Will Soon Be On in Earnest

The "own your own home" campaign, launched by the Klamath county chamber of commerce to relieve the housing situation in this city, will soon be in full swing.

About a month ago, a committee appointed to investigate the practicability of the home building project made its report to the chamber in session at a weekly forum, and the plan was adopted unanimously.

Within a few days the committee will call upon firms and industrial plants to solicit the sale of stock. This committee is composed of H. D. Mortensen, chairman; W. H. Klingenberg, Captain J. W. Siemens, Leslie Rogers, O. D. Burke, E. M. Subb, A. J. Voye, Dr. F. C. Campbell, and H. N. Moe.

Pilgrims' Landing Observed by Descendants at Plymouth Today

PLYMOUTH, Mass., Dec. 21.—On the shore of Plymouth bay, where the pilgrims landed on December 21, 1620, their descendants today joined with other distinguished men of America, Great Britain, and Holland, in the observance of the centenary of the landing.

Captain O. C. Applegate, of this city, has contributed an original poem, dedicated to the Pilgrims, to The Herald, and it is printed below. The first two paragraphs were written by the captain away back in 1894, and were incorporated by him in a speech made in the city of Washington while he was there at that time on official business.

The Pilgrims.

They sought, away from soulless power, The rugged, rock-bound strand, And found release from from kingly greed That cursed their native land.

A brighter day for manhood's weal In Plymouth's woods began; The Pilgrims sought these solitudes With faith in God and man.

From noble thoughts of rugged men A mighty progress grew As o'er the Continental leagues Went forth the message new.

No tyrant's banner long shall wave Nor lordling long oppress When freemen from our native shores Go forth new homes to bless.

Who laid foundations on the rock In dismal forest gloom, And requiems sang on barren shore, O'er many a lonely tomb,

Old Ocean's vastness cannot stay The march of freedom's sons, Nor feudal castles long withstand The might of freedom's guns.

At the Theaters

THE STAR THEATRE Charles Ray is the bashful country boy salesman of auto trucks in "Alarm Clock Andy," another of his inimitable screen comedies showing tonight at the Star theatre.

The opportunity comes when Andy encounters a big buyer of trucks and, making a good impression with his earnestness, appropriates the name of the firm's star salesman and closes a big order.

The role fits Charles Ray like a glove, and Tom Guise, Millicent Fisher and the others in the supporting cast are above the average.

THE LIBERTY THEATRE

Lovers of that type of photoplay which deals with life in the frozen north will be keenly interested in the announcement that "Camille of the Yukon," a screen adaptation of Larry Evans' famous novel.

The story is woven about Lady Lou, who incurred the hatred of her worthless stepfather because of her mother's unfaithfulness. Later, when her father opens a dance hall in Salmon Creek, on the Yukon, Lady Lou exposes her father while he is in the act of cheating her lover, Jean Moreau, at gambling.

In the cast are Miriam Cooper, Charles Clary, Monroe Salisbury, Ralph Lewis, Henry C. Barrow, Howard Davies and William Eagle Shirt.
